China Mobilizes, Chiang to Rule Banks, Railways

Japan May Protest U. S. Aid to China

Aviators' Plan to Enlist Arouses Charges of Neutrality Breach.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

Nanking, (Friday), Aug. 6.—China's supreme war council, with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek presiding, placed the entire nation on a war basis today and ordered central government divisions resisting a Japanese attack northwest of Peiping "to fight to the death."

For the first time in Chinese history, the financial and economic resources of the nation were placed under the personal control of the generalissimo, as chief of the government and the army, and made entirely subservient to the needs of the military.

The step was described as a mobilization of the national economic system for defense.

Draft regulations were drawn up giving the dictator, through his ministry of finance, control of all Chinese banks, securities and commodities exchanges and transportation.

Embassies Warn Japan.

Meanwhile, the United States, British, French and Italian embassies in Peiping were reported to have warned Japan she must live up to clauses of the Boxer Protocol guaranteeing the maintenance of communications between Peiping and Tientsin.

The warning was caused by increasing fears of the diplomatic body that Americans and Europeans in Peiping may be endangered by the spreading Chinese-Japanese hostilities.

The exchange value of the Chinese yuan, already under regulation, will be limited further through use of credits obtained in the United States and Britain by Dr. H. H. Kung, finance minister, who has been active in both Washington and London since he attended the coronation of King George VI in May.

The finance minister earlier had arranged with Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau in Washington to purchase an unrevealed amount of United States gold, paying for it with China's ample silver reserves. Chinese understood this credit was good up to about $50,000,000.

China is particularly anxious to learn the exact implications of the German-Japanese declaration of last year against Communism and to make certain of German neutrality in event of a general conflict in the Orient. She has a powerful lever because of Germany's considerable foreign trade in this country.

The military situation in the north was considered to be growing more critical hourly.

Peiping reported a Japanese mixed brigade, which marched out of the gray-walled northern capital early yesterday, had established contact with Gen. Tang En-po's Eighty-fifth Division, which was entrenched astride the Peiping-Suiyuan Railway below the strategic Nankou Pass, leading to the fertile hinterlands of Chahar and Suiyuan.

The war office here believed a major battle was developing before Nankou and was reported to have sent Chinese cavalry regiments from Kalgan to head off Japanese cavalry and armored cars reported striking westward from Dolonor in an effort to turn Gen. Tang's flank.

The war office anticipated Nankou

D.C. Teacher Held For Grand Jury in Child's Abduction

Waiving preliminary hearing before Justice of the Peace George S. Phillips, Berwyn, Md., Mrs. Marion W. Campbell, Washington high school teacher, yesterday was ordered held on $500 bond for the Prince Georges County grand jury next October on a charge of abducting 20-month-old Phillip Shane, of Beltsville, Md.

John S. White, her attorney, said he decided to await grand jury action because of Mrs. Campbell's "highly nervous condition."

A Washington teacher for 14 years, Mrs. Campbell is alleged to have seized the Shane child in front of his home July 19 and driven him away in her automobile. She was arrested by State police shortly after the alleged abduction at Berwyn.

In addition to abduction, the woman was charged with driving under the influence of liquor. She is scheduled to be tried in police court on this charge August 18, Phillips said.

Shocked Clubmen Bar Viscountess' Blue Linen Pants

Cowes, Isle of Wight, Aug. 5 (AP). The exclusive Royal Yacht Squadron acted today to guard its dignity against further shocks like the one administered by Viscountess Hinchingbrooke and her blue linen pants.

Members of "the world's most exclusive club" met in solemn conclave to discuss Tuesday's incident when the young and attractive lady walked across the club's lawn in bright blue slacks and had her tea with supreme indifference.

They decided against including a "no trousers for women" regulation among the written rules—but they armed the doorkeeper with a formal document to be shown to any woman trying to emulate the viscountess' example. The document, it was understood, emphasized the membership's disapproval of the garb.

Picketing Ban Plans Assailed As Dictatorial

Minority Report Presages Spirited Fight on Hull Proposal.

By Edward T. Folliard

A spirited fight, one that may further "embarrass" the State Department, awaits the McReynolds-Pittman resolution to prohibit the picketing of embassies and legations here, it was indicated yesterday.

Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), of New York, and Representative Robert G. Allen (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, submitted a minority report saying that the resolution violated the Constitution and smacked of a "dictatorial form of government.

Representative Maury Maverick (Democrat), of Texas, outstanding House liberal, joined in the assault with a satirical word picture of what might be expected if the joint resolution is adopted.

Maverick Pictures Result.

Maverick said he understood the anti-picketing resolution was sent to Congress by Secretary of State Cordell Hull because of complaints by the German Nazi government and the Italian Fascist government. Predicting that the resolution would do more harm than good, Maverick said:

"What will happen is that within a reasonable period of time groups of persons will picket an embassy, will be arrested and will get anywhere from 10 to 100 times as much publicity as if they were let alone.

"Suppose some one marches by the German Embassy with a sign like this: 'Hitler and the Nazi German government are persecuting the Jews, are killing them, taking away their property rights and committing brutalities and inhumanities,' or 'Hitler has a toothbrush mustache and belongs in a chamber of horrors.'

"Of course, such a person would be arrested, and if there were any resistance offered he or she would be duly shown in every newspaper in the entire world, except, possibly, Germany and Italy.

Called Unconstitutional.

"We have gotten along for 150 years without such a law," he added. "No demonstration in front of an embassy ever got us into a war."

Maverick agreed with Fish and Allen that the legislation was clear-

Lobby Angers Senate With Housing Pleas

Wagner Takes Blame, Says He Didn't Know It Was Wrong.

By Robert C. Albright.

The Senate turned yesterday from lethargic revamping of the $700,000,000 Wagner housing bill to spank soundly a bold lobby for attempts to reverse the chamber's limitation on cost of slum clearance dwellings.

Distribution of "propaganda" to Senators by pages was charged on the floor by Senator Bennett Champ Clark, Missouri Democrat. Clark said it set a "dangerous" precedent, "employing the machinery of the Senate for the purpose of covering the desks of Senators with propaganda and literature."

Senate Minority Leader Charles L. McNary joined in the verbal dressing down administered the lobby. He promised to seek a special rule providing penalties "for an organization attempting to do a thing here which never heretofore was conceived by any other organization which is in existence for profit and gain."

Accuse Langdon Post.

Target of the protests were statements by the American Federation of Housing Authorities, the Housing Legislation Information Office, the Labor Housing Conference and the National Association of Housing officials. Page boys had placed copies on each Senator's desk.

Allegedly prepared by Langdon Post, president of the American Federation of Housing Authorities, the statement advanced five arguments against the Byrd amendment, adopted by the Senate Wednesday. The amendment restricted cost of the new slum clearance homes to $4,000 each, or $1,000 a room.

Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, author of the bill, assumed full responsibility for the incident, and admitted it was "an improper practice."

"I thought it was information which was very important for Senators to have," said the New Yorker. "Perhaps I was wrong in that, but I thought any kind of enlightenment on the subject we were considering was perfectly proper, and I suggested that the Senators be given this particular information. If the thing is wrong, I am the person who must be subject to criticism, and no one else."

Seeks $1,400 Limitation.

The Byrd amendment was adopted 40 to 39, a margin of only one vote. Wagner will attempt reconsideration of the cost limitation as the Senate today enters its fifth day of controversy on the housing measure. Majority Leader Barkley said a limitation of $1,400 per room, instead of $1,000, will be sought.

New modifications appeared in the bill yesterday, as the Senate continued rewriting it on the floor. On motion of Senator Millard E. Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, the Senate voted to prevent more than 20 per cent of all housing loans and grants going to any one State.

Tydings originally proposed a 10 per cent limitation, but raised it to 20 on request of Senator Royal S. Copeland, of New York. New York has approximately 10 per cent of the population, and the Tydings proposal was substituted for an amendment by Senator Alva B. Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, to distribute the funds between the States on a population basis.

Meantime, bids were made on both sides of the Capitol to subordinate the proposed new housing authority, under the Interior Department.

Secretary of Interior Ickes told the House Banking Committee that instead of being an independent agency, the new housing administration should come under his department's jurisdiction, because of its low-cost housing experience.

Ickes said a three-man, independent agency, "just doesn't make sense to me," and there "would be just as much logic to passing a bill providing for three secretaries of the Treasury."

"If you don't want to give this program to the Interior, put it anywhere you like, but put it in one of the executive departments, where a Cabinet officer would be responsible."

In the Senate, Senator M. M. Logan (Democrat), Kentucky, offered an amendment placing new

Mother Wanted to Live With Her

Victor Orsatti was granted a divorce from June Lang (above), film star, because "too much mother-in-law" after the nuptials "ruined the marriage." He said Mrs. Edith Vlasek, the mother-in-law, was occupying his home when he and his bride returned from their wedding trip, then left the next day. The bride joined her, telling Orsatti to "get out of the house, so mother and I can come back." They were married May 29 and separated July 12.

Cancer Center Is Authorized By Roosevelt

President Roosevelt yesterday signed legislation authorizing erection of a $750,000 National Cancer Institute and authorizing an annual appropriation of $700,000 to carry on cancer research and purchase radium. The funds, however, are still to be supplied by Congress.

This marked another step in the first co-ordinated and Nation-wide fight against America's second biggest killer—the ancient scourge that since 1900 has climbed from last to next to top among the ten diseases ranking highest in death rates. Only heart disease outranks it.

Congress is expected to appropriate at least a portion of the funds before it adjourns, in order that construction may begin without delay. The site will be near Bethesda, Md., where buildings to house the National Institute of Health already are under way. Forty-five acres were donated to the Public Health Service by the late Luke Wilson, a trustee of Woodward & Lothrop, who was himself a victim of cancer.

Dr. L. R. Thompson, director of the National Institute of Health, said estimate for the appropriation needs for the remainder of the year will be presented to the Treasury Department today.

To Buy Radium.

He did not divulge the amount which will be asked, but it is presumed that it will be five-sixths of the $700,000 annual appropriation stipulated in the bill. Of this amount, it was anticipated that $200,000 annually will go to the purchase of radium.

Dr. Thompson said last night there is no need to delay radium buying until the institute is com-

Motor Arrests Soar as Safety Crusade Begins

All Precincts to Get Orders to Put Campaign Under Way.

By Howard P. Wentworth.

Traffic arrests soared yesterday as police opened a determined offensive against highway accidents.

Special orders will be sent out today to all precinct commanders calling for continuous concentration on death-breeding law infractions.

By midnight, the names of 242 persons had been booked at the precincts for a wide variety of traffic offenses. It was certain the number would be considerably higher when reports of arresting officers are tabulated this morning.

Inspector L. I. H. Edwards, acting superintendent of police, announced that every member of the force will be spurred to alertness with strict orders to enforce all existing traffic regulations.

On all fronts, word went out that officials and citizen leaders are prepared to bring a new safety record to Washington. Arrest books in nearly every precinct station showed a marked rise in the number of motorists apprehended for minor and major violations.

But at the same time, Inspector Edwards warned his men that arrests should not be made "just for the sake of making arrests." He admonished patrolmen to temper their enforcement with discretion.

Drive to Continue.

"This is not a spasmodic drive," said Edwards. "We are going to keep constantly after traffic—hammering and hammering until we get results. We must have better observance of the regulations. Each day, a new regulation will be quoted to policemen for their special attention."

District inspectors, Edwards declared, will make personal visits to all police stations within their jurisdictions, instructing officers in methods of enforcement and warning that the city's accident and death rate must be reduced.

Renewed safety efforts started Wednesday when 19 police officials met with Commissioners Hazen and Sultan in the office of Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer. Current problems were discussed at length and similar sessions, it was decided, will be held each month.

At the next conference, it was announced, the various Police Court judges and city prosecutors will be asked to express their views and offer suggestions for better traffic control.

Precinct captains yesterday delivered "pep" talks at each roll call. Patrolmen were told to "keep on their toes" and take action in every traffic violation which comes to their attention.

Capt. Arthur Miller, commanding the Third Precinct, reminded his men that five persons have met accidental death in that territory since

Russia to Include Litvinoff in Next 'Purge,' Paris Told

Paris, Aug. 5 (U.P.).—The newspaper Le Jour said today that Maxim Litvinoff, commissar of foreign affairs, is to be one of the next victims of the "purge" in Soviet Russia.

His arrest, the paper said, would follow that of Admiral Orlov, commander of the Soviet fleet, who attended the recent coronation in London with Litvinoff. Another victim, according to Le Jour, will be Admiral Vichorov, chief of the Soviet fleet in the Pacific, who was recently relieved of his command and is to be executed.

Marshal Bluecher, who commanded the Russian forces in the Far East but returned to Moscow as a military judge, may have a similar fate awaiting him, Le Jour's dispatch suggested.

51 Proposals Made to Plug Tax Loophole

Congress' Joint Group Suggests Changes in Present Law.

Present Deductions Are Cut and Surtaxes Increased.

By Sidney Olson.

The Joint Congressional Tax Investigating Committee yesterday recommended 51 plugs for the eight huge loopholes in the present tax laws through which have escaped millions of dollars in taxes due the Treasury.

In a joint report the committee suggested 51 changes in the present law—changes which the House Ways and Means Committee will draft into a bill after a brief two days of hearings next Monday and Tuesday. These changes drastically reduce present deductions and slap on higher surtaxes.

Almost literally, the committee took a meat-cleaver to personal holding companies, domestic and foreign, the favorite device, according to the Treasury, of wealthy Americans seeking to avoid taxes.

Eleven of the 12 committeemen, headed by Chairman Robert L. Doughton (Democrat), North Carolina, for the House, and Vice Chairman Pat Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi, for the Senate, signed the report.

The twelfth, Senator William H. King (Democrat), Utah, was ill during the hearings.

"Encouragement" was given to the direct dissolution of foreign personal holding companies, and for those that remain an innovation in American tax laws was suggested.

This was a recommendation in general that the undistributed part of a foreign personal holding company's net income should be included in the gross income of the American citizen or resident just as if such undistributed income had actually been distributed.

Yachts, Stables Involved.

This departure was decided on as necessary, the committee report said, "to protect the revenue and prevent further use of one of the most glaring loopholes now existing." It would affect only foreign corporations which are owned 50 per cent or more by five American citizens or residents, including their families, who have the same type of investment income that makes a domestic corporation subject to tax as a personal holding company.

Thus excluded are real foreign operating companies and those holding companies where the ownership is widely spread.

Specific action in each case and in a variety of ways was recommended for the cases of incorporated yachts and racing stables, incorporated personal talents (such as those of actors), deductions for losses artifically contrived, multiple trusts and non-resident aliens who receive American income and pay little taxes.

The problem of alleged tax-saving devices based on single premium life insurance policies issued by fake foreign insurance companies, one of the biggest sensations of the tax hearings, was passed over in the report with the sentence:

"The committee believes the existing law is adequate to reach these cases."

Climax of Hearings.

Pension trusts, a tax avoidance system sometimes used, was also passed over for the present, but the committee said that this would come in for further study and report later.

The report climaxed the hearings that followed the President's June 1 message to Congress calling attention of the body to tax evasion and avoidance, which he described as "a condition. . . . so serious to the Nation that the Congress and the people are entitled to information about it."

A group of tax avoidance devices were then described to the joint committee by Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., and other Treasury officials. The general agreement of the legislators at the close of these sessions, after a number of more or less startling dis-

40 Senators Ask Special Session For Farm Relief

Sen. Smith Assails Move as 'Unfair'

Barkley Supports Plan; Roosevelt Seeks Swap With Cotton Bloc.

By William V. Nessly.

A suddenly developing movement on Capitol Hill for a special session of Congress in October to enact general farm legislation brought a heated controversy in the Senate yesterday after 40 Senators, disturbed by falling farm prices, had signed a petition for such a session.

Senate Floor Leader Barkley, of Kentucky, told the Senate it is not the present intention to remain in session to pass a farm bill or recess until in the fall, when a measure might be ready, but pointed out that should the House and Senate Agriculture Committees agree on proposed legislation, the President could then summon the legislators back into session.

"And I express the hope," the majority leader said, "that they will bring in a bill in time for us to be called into sessoin by November."

There arose then the possibility a Senate majority might instruct its Agriculture Committee, over the protests of Chairman Ellison D. (Cotton Ed) Smith, of South Carolina, to have a report ready by October 15 or November 1.

Revelation of the petition's circulation came shortly after President Roosevelt had told a cotton bloc committee that if he could have definite assurance from Congress that farm legislation would be the first considered at the January session, he would give favorable consideration to the plea for renewal of loans on agricultural products to prevent a complete break in the market.

Smith Protests.

The petition caused an immediate and emphatic protest from Senator Smith. Declaring he was "astonished" at its being circulated, he declared he saw in it an implication the committee was not working with satisfactory speed. He held it was "unfair" to the committee.

On the House side the special session move had made no noticeable progress, but the attitude of the farm area Representatives is expected to be determined at a caucus at 10 a. m. today, when the committee that visited President Roosevelt yesterday will report.

Senator Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, wrote the President in a letter made public late last night:

"With reference to the requests which have been submitted to you for your approval of loans by the Commodity Credit Corporation upon cotton at the rate of 12 cents a pound, I am in accord with the view attributed to you in the press that with the prevailing price of cotton and the failure of the existing law to more effectively control production, it would be unwise to lend as much as 12 cents per pound."

Seeks 10-Cent Loan.

"I want to suggest that you approve the plan approved by you in 1933, namely, a loan of 10 cents per pound and a price adjustment agreement to give to those farmers who sell the difference between the sale price and 12 cents pere pound, should the market price thereafter reach 12 cents per pound."

Senator Pat Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, brought the petition to light when he arose in the Senate to ask information from the Senate leaders on the program with respect to a farm bill. His remarks brought a reading of the petition by Senator Hugo Black (Democrat), of Alabama, who had sponsored it.

The petition said that since a large proportion of farmers make their crop plans and begin to prepare their soil during the autumn and winter months, "it would be unwise to wait until January 1 for Congress to begin to consider general farm legislation."

Several May Back Out.

It expressed the belief the farm committees should "make their studies and investigations and be able to report to this Congress by October 15" and said the signers "agree to use our best efforts to cause the reconvening of Congress by October 15" if farm legislation is not previously passed.

There were indications the full strength of 40 signers remaining after Senator Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, asked his name be taken

Wheeler Hits Party Methods Of Getting Cash

Calls Upon Democrats to Stop Soliciting Rail Inquiry Witnesses.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, yesterday called upon the Democratic National Committee to halt such a "deplorable practice" as soliciting campaign donations from a New York railway executive, Robert R. Young, at the time he faced a Senate investigation.

Wheeler, chairman of the Senate Railroad Finance Investigating Committee, condemned the solicitation at the outset of an inquiry into Young's plan for reorganizing the Nation's largest transportation system, the so-called Van Sweringen empire.

Young had testified Wednesday that he purchased $15,000 worth of Democratic national convention books a few days before he was summoned before the committee this spring.

Wheeler Resents Action.

He declared, however, that the solicitors had never mentioned his dealings with Washington agencies, and that the gift was a personal contribution, exactly like those others he made since 1932.

Snapping out his words, Wheeler asserted that "there always is an inference" that such donations might obtain special favors, even when such things are not discussed.

"I resent the Democratic committee going to people just prior to their coming here and soliciting funds," he said.

"It reflects on this committee and every other branch of Congress."

Merger Plan Hit.

He added that "some groups who denounce economic royalists are getting handouts from the very people they denounce.

"It might give the impression that people had to give money in order to get proper treatment, or that they might get some kind of favors."

A moment later the Montanan criticized Young's plans for merging Alleghany and Chesapeake corporations, the dominant holding companies in the 23,000-mile transportation system which he controls.

He argued the consolidation would perpetuate the holding company set-up, which permits Young to control $3,000,000,000 worth of assets, scattered through more than 100 interlocking corporations, although his own common stock investment is only $255,000.

Pennsylvania Road Wins Railway Race Into Jersey Town

Linden, N. J., Aug. 5 (AP).—Announcement by the State highway commissioner today that the Pennsylvania Railroad would be permitted to build a temporary bridge over a main State highway here climaxed a recent competitive raillaying of two railroads.

The announcement followed by a day the Pennsylvania's sudden cessation of activity in the meadowlands, where a new track, work on which began on Monday's dawn, ended 1,000 feet from Route 25.

Officials of the Pennsylvania and of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, which built a parallel spur, denied the existence of a race, but residents saw in the unexplained tracklaying a bid for business in the fast-growing Linden industrial area. It was reported that railroad lawyers gave an opinion that the first road to reach the highway with a spur would have a prior right to bridge it.

E. Donald Sterner, State highway commissioner, announced today that Jersey Central officials informed him they "no longer desired" to build a bridge.

Doctors Wait for Mother to Die So They Can Save Unborn Baby

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Aug. 5.—White-clad doctors and nurses kept a death watch at the bedside of an expectant mother in the Philadelphia General Hospital today, waiting for her to die in order that they may deliver her unborn baby.

Mrs. Mary Boccassini, 27, is in a coma all day, suffering from a spinal disease for which the doctors said there is no cure.

Doctors understood her husband, Dominick, 40, objected to a post-mortem delivery and they had asked the county court for legal advice, but when he arrived at the hospital late today after working as a laborer all day, he said he had been misunderstood.

He said he would agree to anything the doctors thought best. If it was a question of saving the wife or the baby he would rather save the wife.

Mrs. Boccassini may live 15 minutes to 30 hours, said a doctor who declined to be quoted. He and his colleagues hoped the baby would arrive before Mrs. Boccassini died, but they were prepared for an immediate post-mortem delivery. Her

Whoppers— U. S. S. Saratoga Halted by Whale And Giant Shark (600 Pounds?) Invades Bay

A whale not only stopped the United States Navy but forced it to slow down and back up to boot, according to word received here yesterday from the U. S. S. Saratoga.

That proud airplane-carrier was steaming along at 15 knots in the Straits of Juan de Fuca July 3—at least, she should have been; but her officers were startled to find the speed was actually only 14 knots.

Baffled engineers and other officers held hurried consultations, but it was a keen-eyed seaman who solved the problem.

"A huge fish is caught across the bow" was relayed from forward to break up the experts' conference. Officers raced to the bow to find a whale more than 20 feet long impeding progress, apparently without relish. Whereupon the proud Saratoga was stopped, then backed up, and Mr. Whale thankfully and leisurely went on his way.

The tale arrived in Washington simultaneously with word that a man-eating shark had appeared in Chesapeake Bay, but had been taken into custody promptly.

Capt. Noah Hazard came to town telling of a 600-pound monster, measuring 8 feet 2 inches, that became entangled in fishing nets near Galesville, Md.

At the Bureau of Fisheries, however, Fred G. Orsinger laughed it off. "Sharks rarely invade fresh water," he said, "although with an influx of salt water they sometimes come upstream with the tide. Little nurse sharks have been known to reach Chain Bridge."

Orsinger even opined maybe Capt. Hazard's scales were a little overworked. He added thoughtfully, however, that had that shark been brought to the Hook, Line and Sinker Club it doubtless would have weighed more.

So even though a whale did make the Navy back up, it is not considered likely Capt. Hazard's shark will do much to depopulate the beaches the remainder of the summer.

House Passage Of Sugar Bill Forecast Today

Restrictions on Off-Shore Producers Expected to Remain.

All indications last night pointed to passage by the House today of the sugar bill as it stands, despite a clear warning from President Roosevelt that he will veto it.

Leaders confidently predicted passage by a safe, if not comfortable margin, of the bill, minus the amendment favored by the White House and three Cabinet departments—Agriculture, Interior and State—which would lift tight restrictions on refined sugar imports from the offshore producers—Hawaii, Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico.

Lobbyists outnumbered attending Congressmen in the corridors yesterday, and debate on the floor seemed almost perfunctory compared to the heated sessions in the halls, where rivals from the departments, the refiners, the producers and the territories buttonholed Congressmen to give them the final arguments.

Representative Marvin Jones (Democrat), Texas, told newsmen generally he would introduce his amendment today to lift the rigid limits on offshore refined sugar.

Leaders of the Congressional sugar bloc, confident—with or without reason—of sufficient votes to pass the bill and then to repass it over a Presidential veto, stated after a caucus yesterday that "the fight will continue until we win."

Debate on the bill progressed slowly through the allotted four hours, with Samuel Wilder King, Hawaiian delegate, and soft-spoken Representative Clifford Hope (Republican), Kansas, leading an attack on the present bill's restrictions.

More than a dozen members answered their arguments, making charges of varying degree, including a demand that the "economic oligarchy behind Hawaiian sugar" be investigated (Representative John McCormack (Democrat), Massachusetts).

Today's votes will tell the tale of the progress of the measure, bitterly contested behind the scenes since March 15, and will foreshadow its Senate success, as Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, said yesterday the bill would pass the Senate if the margin were sufficiently impressive in the House.

Autopsy Scheduled For Dr. Hatfield

An autopsy will be performed at the District Morgue this morning on the body of Dr. Daniel Hatfield, 50, who was found dead in his apartment, 534 Twentieth street northwest, yesterday.

Dr. Hatfield was found by Maj. Arthur Kingston, who lives across the hall and who became alarmed at the doctor's absence.

Kingston summoned an ambulance from Emergency Hospital and the accompanying doctor said Hatfield had been dead more than eight hours. No evidence of violence was found in the room and it is thought the man succumbed to a heart attack.

Lynch Law Draws Kentuckian's Fire

Blue Ridge, N. C., Aug. 5 (AP).—Mark Ethridge, general manager of the Louisville (Ky.) Courier-Journal, told the Conference on Education and Race Relations here tonight that "America owes the Negro the stamping out of lynching and the protection of his person and his property from violence born of race prejudice."

"If it requires Federal marshals and Federal deputies to prevent lynchings and punish lynchers in the South, then I am for Federal marshals and deputies doing it," he said.

St. Martin's School Holds Final Party

Three hundred children from 6 to 14 years old closed last night the summer vacation school class of St. Martin's Church with a program of entertainment in Langley Junior High School.

Two plays were presented, the Knights of Columbus Band gave a concert and a program of dancing and music was given by Anne Riley, Margaret Buehne, Loretta Hassett, Julia Farley and Alice Redding.

The Rev. Michael Riordan, pastor of St. Martin's, made a short address. Brother Michael Morgan was director of the class.

Hearing Is Set For Md. Trucker

Baltimore, Aug. 4 (AP).—Wilbur F. Miller, of Union Bridge, will have until August 24 to give the Public Service Commission his reply to charges against his motor freight line service between Liberty and New Windsor.

Miller, trading as the Snyder's Express, holds permits from the commission to operate motor freight lines among certain points in Carroll and Frederick counties and to Baltimore.

The commission ordered Miller today to satisfy the complaints of 12 parties along the Liberty-New Windsor route or answer the charge in writing by August 24. It set a hearing on the complaint for that day.

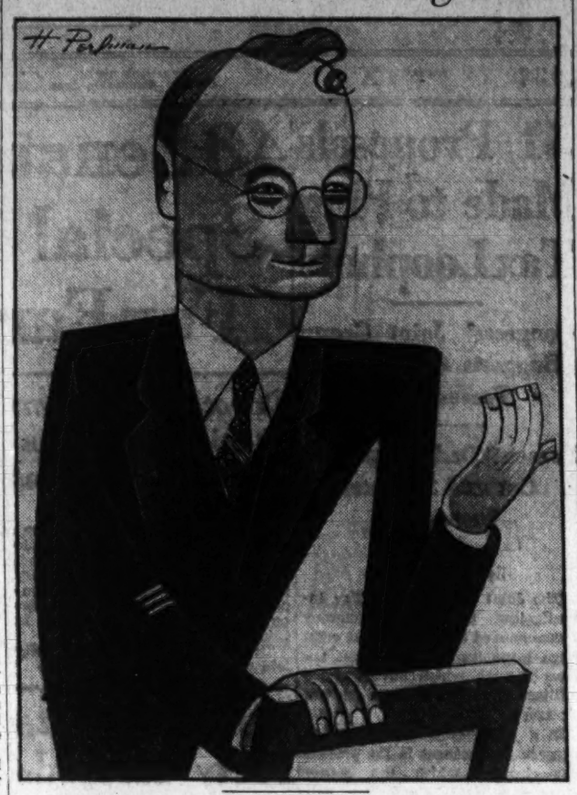
Capital Heat Lacks Terror For New Deal Legislator



Rep. Byrne, of New York, Ardent Backer of President's Welfare Program; Only Hobby Is Reading; In Politics for Years.

By Liam Keith Lenihan.

All the unpleasantries of Washington's sultry summers to the contrary, William Thomas Byrne, Democratic Representative from the Empire State's Twenty-eighth District, is not only perfectly willing but "very anxious" to brave the Capital's heat waves in the interests of the President's objectives.

"Come what will, I shall be here," he said yesterday, and the earnestness of his tone was tinged with a note of defiance.

The gray-haired, 61-year-old legislator who is a "dead ringer" for Interior Secretary Harold Ickes, out-Farleys Farley in praise of the President and describes himself as "a New Dealer to the core."

Native New Yorker.

Biographical sketch: He was born in the town of Florida, Montgomery County, New York; was graduated from the Albany grammar and high schools and in 1904 received his lawyer's sheepskin from the Albany School of Law. Was admitted to the bar and commenced practice in Albany until his election as State Senator in 1923. Served in the State's upper house until 1936, when he ran for and was elected to Congress.

Particularly interested in welfare legislation, Representative Byrne feels we cannot have a well-rounded national program until we have much-needed co-ordination.

"We may believe implicitly in States' rights," he said, "But unemployment and public welfare are not local problems; they are national."

Reading Is Hobby.

Commenting on the Black-Connery wage-hour bill which now has run the gauntlet of the Senate, Byrne said:

"As an experimental piece of legislation it will have a tremendous amount of value in ascertaining how conditions, admittedly bad, can be corrected."

Hobbies: Mainly interested in reading, the Congressman may be found on an off-day "lost" in a biographical sketch, a historical work or a political science treatise.

125-Bed Camp For Tubercular Children Filled

Last Five Admitted on the Chance Gifts Will Finance Them.

Every one of the 125 beds at Bald Eagle Hill camp for tubercular children was filled for the first time last night, as officials of the camp decided to gamble on the chance that funds necessary for the last four or five children would be donated in the near future, Mrs. Ernest R. Grant, camp director, said last night.

Since early in July the enrollment of the camp has more than doubled. At that time it was found there was enough money in the treasury to care for only 60 children for the full season. Private individuals came to the support of the camp, contributing more than $4,000 during the past four weeks.

With contributions rolling in at a rate of more than $100 a day, directors of the camp moved carefully, making sure that each child admitted was entirely protected by the cash on hand.

But yesterday they decided to stop being cautious. A check-up disclosed that only $227.52 more was needed to fill the camp to capacity for the rest of the season. Because the directors were confident that the flow of contributions would continue until the deficit is filled, and because they wanted to give the last five children the benefit of the entire remaining five-week period, they admitted the five yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Grant said that with three meals a day, extra milk, regular rest periods and moderate exercise, the children in the camp had been gaining weight and energy steadily. Many have come from homes where there are pulmonary cases, and the camp program is designed to break the active contact for those still in the early stages of tuberculosis.

Logan Offers Bill to Unravel Court Tangle

Measure Provides for 9 Justices 'Who Have Not Retired.'

Doubts raised by Senator William E. Borah (Republican), of Idaho, that a "vacancy" now technically exists on the Supreme Court, brought a legislative proposal yesterday to remove all doubt in the matter.

Senator M. M. Logan (Democrat), of Kentucky, offered a bill specifying the Supreme Court shall consist of a Chief Justice and eight associate justices, "who have not retired under the provisions of the law."

The "vacancy" in dispute was left by Justice Willis Van Devanter, who retired last June. Borah recently contended Van Devanter is still a full justice, under the full pay retirement act that authorized his departure.

Although President Roosevelt at a subsequent press conference made it clear he thinks a "vacancy" does exist and that he will fill it, Logan moved yesterday to clarify the judicial code. His bill was referred to the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Meanwhile, the court issue promised to flare again in the Senate, immediately after disposal of the Wagner housing bill. Next item on the Senate's calendar is the lower court reform bill.

Senators continued to place Supreme Court nominations before the President. Senators Hatch and Chavez, Colorado Democrats, called on the President to urge appointment of former Senator Sam G. Bratton, of New Mexico, now a Federal circuit judge. Senator Lewis (Democrat), of Illinois, espoused Illinois Supreme Court Justices Orr and Jones.

from the petition, might not be maintained. At least two other Senators were reported prepared to follow his example, one on the grounds he had signed under a misapprehension. Pittman, still favoring the special session, said he doubted if it would be "entirely proper" to urge the President to call one.

Denouncing the petition, Smith declared it was "hardly fair to the farmers, who do not understand the situation," and defended the committee's decision to make a recess study of the situation and "take it to the farmers themselves" in hearings throughout the country. He pointed out that even farm leaders had not been able to agree on the bill presented to the committee.

Senator Byrnes, Smith's colleague, criticized what he called an attitude of "let's pass something to fool Rube again." He praised Smith and Senator Bankhead, of Alabama, for their interest in the farmers, whereupon Black read a telegram from Bankhead which said he favors adjourning until November unless Congress is willing to remain in session until a farm bill is passed.

Black denied there was an intent to criticize Smith's committee.

"I can't forget," he said, "that cotton has slumped to 10 cents a pound. If it should go to 8 cents conditions would be disastrous."

Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, asked whether it was the intention to "limit and control" production.

"It is perfectly icidal," he declared, "to be driving a team both ways at the same time. Here you are proposing to limit production, and at the same time extending reciprocal trade agreements permitting an influx of cheap farm products."

Implying policital motive to some of the farm bill backers, Smith derided the idea of hurrying through an "undigested" measure when it will not apply to the present crop. "I want the farmer to be treated without the dirty hand of politics figuring in it," he added.

Warns of Disaster.

Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, said it was "perfectly clear" that unless Congress takes up a program for control of huge crop surpluses "we shall be responsible for bringing about disaster not only to the farmers but the rest of the people as well."

Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, declared all Smith's committee had to do was "work out a policy—there are plenty of facts in possession of the Department of Agriculture."

Senator Bilbo (Democrat), of Mississippi, said he was convinced after a White House visit there will be no crop loans unless general farm legislation is enacted, "and the farmer of the South will be robbed of hundreds of millions of dollars by speculators."

The House cotton bloc group, headed by Representative Ford (Democrat), of Mississippi, reported after its White House call they were assured of Government loans on crops if the President can be satisfied, through caucus action or the promise of House and Senate leaders, a crop control measure will be given right of way in January. The President's approval has been sought for loans of 12 cents a pound on cotton, 75 cents a bushel on corn and 90 cents to $1 a bushel on wheat. The President has insisted, however, that to continue the loans while there is no production control and the carryover is steadily growing, would break the Treasury.

Advances Discussed.

The White House discussion included not only cotton loans but advances as well on corn, wheat, hogs and other products, but no definite figures on the rates of the loans were discussed.

Members of the committee said Mr. Roosevelt was not attempting to dictate terms of the general legislation and did not discuss specific provisions.

While the committee was selected by a caucus of 35 Southern Representatives, the caucus to which it will report today has been expanded to include all Representatives from corn, wheat and other farming districts.

Representative Ford said Speaker Bankhead and Floor Leader Rayburn were agreeable to the plan to put the farm bill first on the January program, and one of them will attend the caucus today to give that assurance.

Those calling on the President were Senators Smith, Ford, and Representatives Lyndon Johnson, Texas; Tarver, Georgia; Sparkman, Alabama; De Rouen, Louisiana; Terry, Arkansas; Garrett, Texas, and Poage, Texas.

Senators signing the special session petition, aside from Pittman were:

Picketing Ban Plans Assailed As Dictatorial

In asking Chairman McReynolds, of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, and Chairman Pittman, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, to introduce the resolution, Hull explained that it has been "extremely embarrassing" to the State Department to be reminded by foreign ambassadors and ministers that their embassies and legations are being picketed.

To be able to obtain protection for American diplomats abroad, Hull said, this country has to be in a position to guarantee protection to foreign diplomats in this city.

Fish and Allen, in their minority report, said that the anti-picketing resolution might be a proper kind of regulation "under a dictatorial form of government, which permits no criticism," but has no place in a country whose Constitution guarantees the right of assembly and freedom of speech. They added:

"This resolution is so stringent (or loosely written) that an American citizen walking on the sidewalks adjacent to an embassy could be arrested for displaying the American flag on the lapel of his coat. . . ."

housing administration under Ickes' department. Bitterly opposed by Wagner, who said it was "unfair" to make the agency a "mere bureau," the amendment was still pending when the Senate recessed.

Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, and Senator Clark also opposed the Interior claim. Clark argued the Interior Department had no housing experience, and complained of PWA housing activities under Ickes. Walsh said he thought the President was disappointed in PWA housing achievements, and said local public housing authorities would object to the Logan plan.

Lee Attacks Amendments.

As the parade of amendments continued, Senator Josh Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, took the floor to assail amendments he said were "designed to obstruct the purposes of the bill." He opposed particularly the Tydings and Adams amendment on apportioning funds, and said the measure should not be made "a gravy train." He said these and other amendments would "hamstring" the program.

The circulated statement that prompted Clark's and McNary's "propaganda" denunciation, declared the Byrd $4,000 limitation on slum clearance loans would "defeat the purpose of the bill."

It said that 22 typical low cost housing projects "averaged" $1,147 a room two years ago, when building costs were 15 per cent cheaper. Family units built under the Wagner bill should average $1,477, the statement argued.

On learning pages were distributing the statements, Clark asked the presiding officer, President Pro Tem Key Pittman, if the rules of the Senate permit "such a practice."

Pittman said he knew of no rule or precedent covering the matter, adding that "an employe of the Senate would be subject to reprimand or other action by the Senate if he permitted such an act on behalf of anyone except a Senator." He said it would be their "duty" to distribute the statements if a Senator told them to.

Clark said he had no intention of criticizing the page boys, but thought "circulation of propaganda on pending legislation from private sources is an extremely dangerous practice."

McNary Unsatisfied.

When Wagner assumed responsibility, McNary said his statement "does not cover this case."

"This is the boldest attempt to influence legislation I have seen in 20 years in this Senate," said the Senate minority leader. "Doubtless the responsibility lies with this organization that is opposing the limitation on the cost of housing. It is supposed to be a reputable institution with headquarters in Washington. I assume they inspired this propaganda for purposes of profit, because that is the line of business in which they are engaged."

McNary said he thought it was an "insult to every member of this Senate that this institution should frame a letter in this form, actuated by purposes of gain to themselves to influence legislation in the Senate, particularly that they advocated the method of procedure we should follow, namely, they think a motion should be made to reconsider the vote by which the particular amendment with which they are displeased was carried yesterday."

Federal Agents Seize Large Still At Bethesda, Md.

Federal agents yesterday raided a house at 4927 Battery lane, Bethesda, Md., and seized a large still, a truck load of alleged liquor and two prisoners.

The men were held at the Bethesda police substation last night. They gave their names as Joseph Hopkins, 29, and Lacy Brackner, 18, both of the Battery lane address.

Revenue Agents H. L. Doyle and F. J. Sweeney staged the raid early yesterday. They found the two men loading cans of alleged liquor on the truck. Inside the house they found a complete distilling plant with a 777-gallon still and several large vats of fermenting wheat bran. Nearly 500 cans of alleged liquor were seized.

NLRB Is Charged With Favoring C. I. O. by Bay State Labor Federation

A.F.of L. Group Roars Support Of Its Leaders

Inquiry Demanded, Peace Proposal Is Quickly Doomed.

By the Associated Press.

Lowell, Mass., Aug. 5.—The Massachusetts Federation of Labor tonight roared support of its leaders' "declaration of war" on the Committee for Industrial Organization, demanding investigation of alleged C. I. O.-bias by Labor Board officers and killing a proposal for peace with the C. I. O.

The fifty-second convention of one of the Nation's largest State federations became one of the first to question the impartiality of the system of labor-dispute adjudication set up under the Wagner-Connery labor relations act.

No voice rose from the floor to contest the committee on resolutions' recommendation that the federation's executive council "investigate" and, if necessary, "take action against officers of the New England Regional Labor Board."

Later the convention rejected by a 208-to-28 vote a resolution calling for peace overtures toward the C. I. O., proposed by eight union men headed by E. A. Johnson, secretary of Boston Building Trades Council.

The committee on resolutions localized the resolution on the Labor Board by asking investigation only of the New England representatives of the National Labor Relations Board.

The original resolution, proposed by George T. Douglas, Haverhill, organizer for the Boot and Shoe Workers Union, had demanded removal of officers and members of the national board, and charged:

"The N. L. R. B. has clearly shown it is actively supporting and upholding the C. I. O., has been biased toward the C. I. O., and has interjected itself into situations where no clear cause for intervention existed, creating and encouraging unrest and industrial discontent."

Chrysler Election Looms.

Detroit, Aug. 5 (AP).—An inter-union fight that caused 21,000 workers to be idle tonight may result in the first National Labor Relations Board election affecting employes of one of the "Big Three" of the automobile industry.

Richard T. Frankensteen, organizational director of the United Automobile Workers of America, announced he would petition the board for an election among workers employed by the Chrysler Corporation.

Leaders of the union headed by Homer Martin, president, conferred with corporation officials in an attempt to reach an agreement for reopening the big Plymouth plant, closed since ten men were injured yesterday in fighting between members of the U. A. W. and of the Independent Association of Chrysler Employes. The association was organized to oppose the U. A. W., an affiliate of the Committee for Industrial Organization. Eleven thousand Plymouth workers were idle.

Truck Strike Ended.

Philadelphia, Aug. 5 (AP).—Trucking in the city tonight continued at above normal volume as hauling firms moved large stocks of merchandise and produce tied up since Monday by a widespread strike of drivers and helpers.

Only the strike against Haulers under contract to the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. continued. It was this strike called by the American Federation of Labor's teamsters' union and the union's complaint that the hauling firms were employing "thugs" to escort their trucks, that brought a widespread strike which tied up a third of the city's trucks.

Goodyear Company Accused.

Gadsden, Ala., Aug. 5 (AP).—Charges that it sponsored "acts of terrorism" on union men were made against the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. of Gadsden in a complaint by the Atlanta regional office of the National Labor Relations Board today. A hearing was set here for August 12.

300 Boy Scouts Leave Here For Camp Roosevelt on Bay

Rodeo and Wild West Show Will Be Staged Today; 16 Sea Scouts Prepare for Cruise of 400 Miles.

When a Boy Scout wants to rest up from camping he just goes camping in another place. Two days after District Scouts had been host to the big Jamboree that still has Washington talking, approximately 300 of them took off for Camp Roosevelt (Theodore) down on Chesapeake Bay—to recuperate and camp some more.

Yesterday, recuperation was completed and the camping situation well in hand. The boys prepared for the rodeo and Wild West show they will stage today, worked in leather belts, classified snakes, managed sailboats, and entered into the other activities of Boy Scouts.

Sea Scouts Take Tests.

The 16 Sea Scouts were passing tests that will enable them to start Sunday on a 400-mile cruise in a 90-foot schooner. By means of the new camp radio equipment they will be in touch with "headquarters" three times a day; but they will not be back in sight of camp for seven days.

Twenty Scouts were taking their turns at the radio station watch, picking up weather forecasts, talking to other Scout camps, sending messages back to Washington, and being instructed in the science by Oscar Reed, licensed amateur operator.

Up on the bluff a crew of Maine woodsmen were at work on the new mess hall—the first unit in what it is hoped will be a big camp building and rebuilding program. The big rustic hall, built mostly from timbers prepared on the grounds, will face the bay and have two huge fireplaces.

As soon as the mess hall is completed, work will begin on a new hospital, with a six-bed infirmary wing. Funds for this and its equipment have been assured by the Washington medical profession and private donors. Other needed buildings will depend on success of the financial campaign now under way.

It has been estimated that $35,000 would build a new recreation hall, a nature lodge, new cabins and camp units, a wide road into the camp and provide a more extensive program. Camp Roosevelt is 19 years old and most of its buildings represent the original investment.

Boys Turned Away.

Boys were turned away from camp this year because of lack of space. Facilities for between 500 and 600 at a time are needed. Camp acreage now totals 140 acres, 23 of which were bought and donated recently by Maj. John S. Hawley, member of the camp committee, who teaches a mapping class and whose major hobby is boys.

Camp Roosevelt's staff includes Linn C. Drake, chief camp director; H. L. Maze, camp director; "Spike" Bailey, assistant camp director; Dr. Walter H. Merrill, medical director and chairman of the camping committee; Albert Sherman, assistant medical director; Herbert Tucker, chief camp master; Harry M. Cutler, camp quartermaster, and enough other camp masters, officers and directors to run the total to 50.

Shareholders in the Fidelity Building & Loan Association working at the Government Printing Office yesterday organized their support of efforts to break the deadlock of the closed bank.

At a meeting yesterday in the G. P. O. auditorium, more than 200 employes selected a committee of three men to represent them at any conference where the disposition of the tied up funds is discussed.

The men elected were Leo A. Schmidt, Walter Sonntag and D. A. Irr. Public Printer A. E. Geigengack, who presided over the meeting, instructed the committee to select its own president.

A tabulation of the names and amount of money the shareholders had invested in the Fidelity would be started immediately, the committee announced.

Mrs. Mark C. Bullis, representing the shareholders, stated last night that representatives of the Federal Home Loan Bank board, Comptroller's office and shareholders would meet at the Treasury Department this morning for another session to decide the fate of the First Federal Savings Bank.

"I believe," she said, "that we will find a solution at this meeting."

Marked Increase In Crime Reported For Year by F.B.I.

A nation-wide increase in crime was shown in reports of the Federal Bureau of Investigation yesterday.

On the basis of reports submitted by police in 67 cities, the bureau reported murders and non-negligent manslaughters increased from 569 to 615 in the first six months of the year, while robberies jumped from 5,524 to 6,388; assault, 4,866 to 4,916; criminal assault, 763 to 891; burglaries, 28,971 to 32,108; larcenies, 72,244 to 84,201 and auto thefts from 22,370 to 24,422.

The figure covering criminal assault for the first half of the year was higher than in all other years except 1934.

Jobless Man Plunges 50 Feet, Saves Drowning Mother of 3

Mrs. Caroline Brown, 36, of 5018 Fifth street northwest, is in Emergency Hospital after being rescued yesterday from the Potomac River by an unemployed painter.

The painter, James W. Cogswell, of 217 F street northwest, jumped 50 feet from the ledge of the Arlington Memorial Bridge causeway, swam to Mrs. Brown and held her head above water until two men from a nearby dredge rowed to them and pulled both out.

The rescuer was driving with his two sons, Irvin, 14, and Raymond, 11, when the two boys noticed a woman sitting on the rail of the bridge, apparently writing a note.

"She looks like she's going to jump off the bridge," they told Cogswell.

He drove on, but the boys watched the woman through the rear window of the car. Then one cried:

"She's jumped. The lady's jumped off."

Cogswell turned at midbridge and returned to the spot from which Mrs. Brown had leaped.

Pulling off his shoes, he plunged in. A few seconds later he had reached the drowning woman. Earl Bratten and Charles Seymour, both of Norfolk, working on the dredge, took in the situation, and within a few moments had both Mrs. Brown and Cogswell in their rowboat.

Mrs. Brown left a sealed note addressed to the police. The contents were not revealed.

Her sister, Mrs. Mildred Burrows, of the Fifth street address, said Mrs. Brown had been ill. She also added that Mrs. Brown, who has been widowed for three years, had left her home earlier in the day to go to Georgetown Hospital for a nerve treatment. Mrs. Brown has three children.

Firemen Return $10 Family Spent To Aid Hurt Son

The $10 grocery money Bernard Cannon spent to get his son from Crystal Beach, Md., where the young man broke his back last Saturday, to Emergency Hospital, in Washington, came back to him last night from the Annapolis Fire Department.

That was good news for the Cannon family, whose principal earnings are supplied by the 48 hours a month the elder Cannon works for the WPA, but it was scarcely enough to make them happy, because their son, Edward, 28, whose back was broken in a dive at Crystal Beach, was having a bad night in the hospital.

Attendants at Emergency Hospital said his condition was "poor;" that he was having a very "uncomfortable" time.

The Annapolis Fire Department collected the usual fee when Edward was removed to Washington, but J. Albert Fisher, jr., secretary of the ambulance committee, ordered the $10 returned, the Associated Press reported, when it was learned through newspaper accounts that the money was paid from a fund that had been budgeted to feed the Cannons and their four children for a week.

Funerals Halted As Grave-Diggers Go Out on Strike

Kansas City, Aug. 5 (AP).—Gravediggers tossed aside their shovels and grave attendants quit their water sprinklers today to go on a strike which stopped all burials in Kansas City.

Demanding recognition of their union, an A. F. of L. affiliate, they "picketed" all cemetery gates—by sprawling under trees to shade themselves from a temperature in the high nineties.

Ten funerals were conducted today, but none of them ended in burials. Some bodies were placed in mortuary vaults, others in cemetery mausoleums to await settlement of the strike. Between 60 and 150 men were involved.

Rockefeller Trust Fund Shows Gain

New York, Aug. 5 (AP).—The $50,000,000 estate left in 1922 by William Rockefeller, brother of the late John D. Rockefeller, has been growing at the rate of $1,000,000 a year for the benefit of his infant and unborn great-grandchildren, a public accounting in surrogate's court revealed today.

At the present rate of accumulation about 50 great-grandchildren will divide nearly $75,000,000 some time after 1950. The correct value of the estate is $63,713,889, according to Surrogate James A. Foley.

Confidence Man Posing As Doctor Is Hunted

Birmingham, Ala., Aug. 5 (AP).—"Whereabouts unknown" was the listing tonight for the "Yellow Kid," described by Federal agents as a notorious confidence man. J. G. Hill, inspector at the Birmingham postoffice, said the "Kid," Joseph R. Weil, vanished only a few hours before his identity was established definitely and his arrest decided upon.

Hill said Weil, under indictment in New York for using the mails to defraud, had posed as a doctor and worked at a night club here. He is about 60 years old.

Ship Survivor Says Propeller Menaced Boats

Tells Baltimore Inquiry Churning Nearly Sucked Craft Under.

Baltimore, Aug. 5 (AP).—One passenger rescued from the burning steamer City of Baltimore said today the ship's propeller still was turning, menacing lifeboats, when he escaped from the blazing overnight liner.

Another passenger told a Federal board investigating the fire that another ship was in a slight collision with the City of Baltimore shortly after the fire broke out last Thursday night.

Alexander Taylor, a golf professional, en route to a golf tournament when the fire was discovered said he saw crew members stretch hose toward the fire and heard one man say:

"The officers say there's no water."

Then, Taylor continued, the crew abandoned the hose and headed toward the lifeboats. He added that the ropes to lower his lifeboat jammed and had to be cut free. When the lifeboat finally was in the water, he went on, those in it saw the propeller still was turning and sucking the boat toward it.

He said those in the boat, including six crew members, fended the boat away with a pole. Taylor said he tried to persuade the crew to row back and pick up passengers in the water, but he added they refused to touch the oars.

Lieut. Col. Leon Cole gave the board the testimony about the collision. He said he saw the freighter Arkansan coming toward the City of Baltimore.

Reports from Norfolk stated the Arkansan lowered a lifeboat and rescued five persons from the water. However, Col. Cole said the freighter glanced off the side of the City of Baltimore and then drew off. He said he did not see her again.

SEC Told of Activities Of Ex-Distillery Head

By the Associated Press.

Eugene D. Kirkby, Detroit attorney, told the Securities Commission yesterday Harry Low, former president of the Trenton Valley Distillers Corporation of Detroit, appeared to be more anxious to sell stock than to operate the distillery.

Kirkby, a witness in the commission's hearing to determine whether further sales of the corporation's stock should be suspended, said he had little contact with the financing last year because he opposed Low's expansion plans and relations between them became strained.

Realty Men Plead For Licenses Here

The ten-year fight for a bill to regulate the real estate business here was continued Wednesday before a Senate District sub-committee, headed by Senator James H. Hughes (Democrat), of Delaware.

Prominent real estate men who appeared in support of the bill said it would rid the city of fly-by-night operators who sell lots, collect a down payment and then depart. It was brought out that 3,500 complaints against such operators are received each year by the Better Business Bureau.

Proponents included Roger J. Whiteford, attorney; Charles J. Rush, executive secretary of the Washington Real Estate Board; A. Clifford Bangs, chairman of the brokers' division of the National Real Estate Board; J. W. Marshall, of the Better Business Bureau, and Elwood Seal, corporation counsel.

The bill would create a commission to license real estate brokers and salesmen. Bonds would be required, and the broker and the salesman would pay an annual fee of $50 and $10, respectively.

Opponents of the bill said the legislation was not necessary; the $50 fee was too high; it was unfair to exempt lawyers who handled real estate on the side, and the bill was aimed at all outside the local "real estate ring."

Allred Reiterates Plea for 3d Term

Mexico City, Aug. 5 (U.P.).—Gov. James V. Allred of Texas, here on a tour of Mexico, today reiterated his stand in favor of a third term for President Roosevelt.

The Governor added, however, that while "I believe the people of Texas would back him—I don't know about the politicians."

At a press conference in the United States Embassy, the Governor said:

"If the President is available and wants it, I am for him . . . He may need another term to complete his program."

HOLC to Test Group Medical Project Here

2,000 Workers to Pay Monthly Fee to Keep Up Clinic.

A group health clinic for the 2,000 Washintgon employes of the Home Owners Loan Corporation and its affiliates will open about September 1 in time 1300 block of I street northwest.

The program, which will provide medical services for its members at $2.20 to $3.30 a month, is in the nature of an experiment that may lead to a similar program for all Government employees here. HOLC spokesmen said other agencies will be watching the program carefully, although no plans have been formulated so far for similar organizations.

From 1,200 to 1,800 employes are expected to join. By paying $2.20 a month, $3.30 monthly for their families, they will receive practically complete health service from the clinic and three week's hospitalization. A staff of six or seven doctors, under Dr. Henry F. Brown, formerly of the Veterans' Bureau, will be engaged; arrangements are already being made with local hospitals.

Advised of the group's formation, a spokesman for the Medical Society of the District said his organization was not yet familiar enough with the set-up to comment on the plan. If the program means that patients are not allowed free choice of physicians, however, both the Medical Society and the American Medical Association will oppose the plan.

Government money may be used to finance the plan if necessary, Howard Acton of the HOLC, said last night. If the dues do not cover expenses, he indicated, HOLC funds may be used to make up the deficit. Acton said large organizations in private business follow such a plan, on the basis the employes' improved health is well worth the investment.

The corporation which will run the plan is headed by W. F. Penniman, of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board directors. Complete details will probably be announced on Sunday.

Coal Board Aides Get in Civil Service

All employes of the Bituminous Coal Commission will be brought into the Civil Service by noncompetitive examinations in the near future, it has been announced. The decision was made at a conference yesterday between President Roosevelt and Commissioners C. F. Hosford, jr., and C. E. Smith.

Chairman Hosford last night said the decision will not affect the Washington office materially, since most of its 225 employes are already of Civil Service rating. Temporary appointees will have to qualify, he said, but experts are exempt.

Most of the Commission's field workers, numbering over 200, are not yet on Civil Service. The change is expected to take several months. Eventually, when the commission reaches its full strength of about 900 employes, all but experts will be from the Civil Service.

Mahoney Asks Support in N.Y. As New Dealer

Tammany Hears Attack Is Being Maneuvered By Farley.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 5.—Two antagonists marched on the City Hall under the banner of the New Deal tonight as New York Democratic ranks reformed after the latest upheaval in their protracted factional war.

The antagonists were Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia quietly tightening his fusion ranks for a re-election drive, and former Supreme Court Justice Jeremiah Mahoney, eleventh hour substitute designee of the four anti-Tammany county Democratic leaders and a rebel faction of the Manhattan Democratic organization.

Stepping suddenly into the shoes of Grover Whalen, Mahoney offered himself to the Democratic electorate as a Roosevelt supporter against Tammany's anti-New Deal designee, Senator Royal Copeland.

"A vote for Copeland," Mahoney said in his interview, looking forward to the Democratic primary, "is a vote against President Roosevelt and the New Deal."

His remark was quickly taken up by the American Labor Party, one of LaGuardia's principal support sources. It announced, "If Mahoney is a true and genuine New Dealer, as he claims to be, then he would not run against Mayor LaGuardia."

The substitution set Democratic ranks to echoing with reports of a "double cross" and a New Deal assault on Tammany maneuvered by Postmaster General James Farley.

Mahoney immediately stood out as competition for LaGuardia for the electoral support of two groups —labor and Jewish. Besides being close to Senator Robert Wagner, Prime New Deal and Labor leader in the State, Mahoney has a record as counsel to the State Labor Federation.

He also gained popularity by his opposition to U. S. entry in the Olympic games with the city's 2,000,000 Jews, who LaGuardia has wooed with explosive attacks on Hitler.

Reports that "the heat was on" the rebellious Tammany men who joined Harlem District Leader James J. Hines behind Whalen were substantiated by Chieftain Sullivan's declaration today that "the leaders of Tammany are behind Copeland or they are not."

WPA Fails to Cut To Required Quota

By the Associated Press.

The Works Progress Administration reported yesterday that it employed 1,656,533 persons July 17, two days after the deadline set for cutting the rolls to 1,600,000.

On July 3 the figure was 1,776,239. On January 30 it was 2,138,050.

The report showed a total of 2,231,184 on all Federal relief agencies as of July 17. In addition to those on WPA, the following were listed:

Emergency conservation work, 321,375; bureau of public roads, (excluding employment on Federal aid and State highway projects not financed by emergency relief funds), 50,003; public works administration, 111,630; other agencies, 141,643.

The report said 1,803,253, or 96.8 per cent, of the persons employed on WPA as of July 17 were "certified as in need of relief." In the emergency conservation work the percentage was 85.4, or 274,300 persons.

Officials Discuss New Street Plans

A series of conferences over a proposed $300,000 street improvement program here next spring was inaugurated yesterday between District officials and the Bureau of the Budget.

Main job proposed is widening K street into three separate lanes from Twelfth street to Connecticut avenue. The two outside 20-foot roadways will be used for local traffic, reserving the center roadway for through traffic.

Engineer Commissioner Dan. I. Sultan, accompanied by Auditor Donovan and Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, composed the delegation to call upon Budget Bureau experts. After further conferences the bureau is expected to notify the District of its attitude on the matter, possibly within a month.

Dear Sirs,

We have supplied Gin Manufacturers with our select qualities of botanical flavourings for over 200 years but, so far as we know, you are the first Distillers to adopt a rigid set of analytical specifications regarding the chemical constitution of the various gin ingredients.

As a result of your system, we ourselves instituted a method of laboratory analysis of our botanicals, in order the better to meet your requirements, and we thought you would like to know that we regard this scientific addition to our experience in the selection of the most suitable qualities, as highly important, and the acme of perfection in arriving at correct results.

We should like to congratulate you on having brought the system to our notice, and we hope that we shall continue to collaborate with you satisfactorily, as in the past.

Yours very truly,

"I have never felt so confident in driving a car before"

A new principle of driver-vision is a distinguishing feature of the Lincoln-Zephyr V-12 . . . In this safe car the center of gravity is extremely low, yet the view of the road is like that in the old high-built automobiles . . . Investigate this . . . Note how it has been worked out.

EVEN a person of small stature can see the road perfectly from the chair-height seats of the 1937 Lincoln-Zephyr. Women drivers especially are gaining new driving confidence amid today's conditions on the boulevards and streets of our cities and suburbs. In the Lincoln-Zephyr they can judge exactly where they are and how close they are to other vehicles.

This new vision-angle is not just an extra feature added to a motor car. Like many other improvements, it is made possible only by the advanced design of the Lincoln-Zephyr as a whole. Car-minded people will recognize this during the first few minutes of examination and trial. If they have known many cars, including foreign motors with unusual shapes and fittings, their minds will click with approval of the Lincoln-Zephyr and the way its design has woven together new power and safety and comfort!

The body of the Lincoln-Zephyr is not set upon a conventional chassis. Instead, an overhead bridge construction combines body and chassis into one all-steel unit, enormously strong. The interior of the car is wide because the usual running boards have been discarded in favor of narrow buffers. When entering you take only one step directly from the ground to the floor of the car. When seated, you are not over the transmission shaft; you are almost alongside it. Your feet can be placed straight down on the floor. Thus, the low center of gravity brings comfort as well as safety.

You are actually "driving for pleasure" again and getting new thrills out of it with this new kind of automobile. The Lincoln-Zephyr is a great car for point-to-point trips. The reserve power of its 12-cylinder engine, the road-hugging qualities of its low-balanced design and extra-long "springbase"—all these combine to make possible a high average driving speed without the necessity of a high top-speed at any time . . . From all quarters and from all kinds of people come tributes to the Lincoln-Zephyr of 1937.

Try driving it yourself—this car of sleek beauty and impressive performance. Try it on hills, curves, corrugated roads, crowned roads. Note that it handles as easily as a much smaller car. Note its acceleration, its powerful, sensitive brakes, its gasoline economy. Take into account the Lincoln-precision of its engineering, the prestige inherent in its ownership. Call up any near-by Lincoln-Zephyr dealer and arrange for a 100-mile drive. Then compare with any car, American or foreign. And do it today, if possible.

"The short turning radius . . . an important feature"

4 Alexandrians Escape as Boat Upsets in River

One of Party, Caught Under Craft, Saved by Companion.

Police Corpls. George Ellmore and Henry F. Grimm, together with Max Fagelson and Joseph Fagelson, Alexandria merchants, while on a fishing trip Wednesday evening near Fort Foote, on the Maryland side of the river, narrowly escaped drowning when their cabin cruiser, the property of Corpl. Grim, upset in 17 feet of water, when all four occupants congregated on one side of the boat.

When the boat capsized, Max Fagelson was caught under it. He was rescued by Ellmore, the only one in the party who could swim. Fagelson, the only one injured, suffered a slight cut on his forehead.

The four men held onto the boat, calling for help, for an hour and a half, and finally attracted the attention of W. A. Webster, of Fort Foote, who came to their assistance in his launch. Grimm returned to the scene yesterday and refloated his boat.

Senator McCarran's Daughter Divorces Ex-Police Sergeant

Patricia Breckenridge, 18, Wins Freedom in Reno Court.

Mrs. Sylvia Patricia McCarran Breckenridge, 18, won an uncontested divorce yesterday in the State her father, Pat McCarran, represents in the Senate, dissolving her marriage with John D. Breckenrige, 22, the former Capitol police sergeant with whom she eloped last August 14.

The divorce was won in Virginia City, Nev., the Associated Press reported, on a cross complaint to her husband's suit. She charged cruelty.

Mrs. Breckenridge, a graduate of Western High School here, married Breckenridge in a secret ceremony at Carson City, Nev. The announcement was made by her mother several weeks later when it was said the couple planned to live in San Francisco.

As Miss McCarran, Mrs Breckenridge was widely known among members of the Capitol's younger set. Three years ago she broke into the news by disappearing while her mother was in Reno and the Senator was attending an American Legion Convention in Miami, Fla.

The daughter was reported missing by Reno police, but later her mother said Miss McCarran was with the Senator and declined further comment.

Citizens Plan To Protest at Silver Spring

Association Will Air Opposition to Rezoning Stand.

Indignant because the Montgomery County Commissioners ignored their opposition to establishment of a commercial center on Saratoga avenue at the gateway to the subdivision, the Sligo Park Hills Citizens Association will hold a special meeting at 8 p. m. tonight at Jesup Blair Community House, Silver Spring, Md.

Tallman W. Peel, president of the association, said the meeting had been called to decide on further action. Approximately 100 citizens protested against the commercial rezoning which will allow stores and apartments.

In a letter to County Commissioner Paul M. Coughlan, in charge of the Silver Spring area, Peel asked on behalf of the association whether "they are elected to protect the taxpayers who elect them or whether they make their decisions in favor of real estate speculators who care nothing about lowering values of residential property in the vicinity."

The letter also asks Commissioner Couglan to inform the association whether there is any place in the county where residents can buy without feeling that sometime or other the "commissioners might think some cheap apartments and stores might look good in the center of the residential section." Immediate reply was requested in the letter. Residents who signed the petition for rezoning, claim the matter was misrepresented to them in obtaining their signatures.

Montgomery County's road gang lost another worker yesterday, when George Swimley, 52, of Hagerstown, Md., sentenced to work on the roads on a driving while under the influence of liquor charge, "walked off."

W. S. Magruder, of Gaithersburg, was guarding the prisoners near Woodfield and did not miss the man until the prisoners were being rounded up for return to jail at Rockville, police said.

The much-heralded outing of the Young Men's Democratic Club of Takoma Park, Md., will be held tomorrow at Old Cedar Point, Morgantown, Md. More than 1,000 persons are expected to attend the outing.

Potential Democratic candidates for Governor of Maryland will be guests of honor and many prominent Maryland Democrats are expected to be in attendance.

The committee in charge, headed by F. Byrne Austin, has worked for weeks at the herculean task of providing food, entertainment and recreation for the guests.

Marine's Death Called Accidental Drowning

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 5 (AP).—The death of Sergt John G. Arnold, U. S. M., was listed today by Dr. R. E. Whitehead, Princess Anne County coroner, as "accidental drowning."

Coroner Whitehead said Arnold's body was found yesterday at the water's edge at East Ocean View. It was believed he drowned sometime Tuesday.

Surviving are his wife and five children. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Not Far From Blackmail.

In spite of the reluctance of the House to investigate the sale of Democratic National Convention books, that shady chapter in our recent political history is gradually being revealed. It crops out in Congressional hearings, press reports and revelations by the victims. It is clearly possible that the story will reach a climax where Congress will have to seek out the facts to offset the sensational rumors and piecemeal reports.

Solicitations which elicited $15,000 from Robert R. Young at a time when two holding companies under his control were targets of Federal inquiry come so near to an outright shakedown that a Democratic Senator has risen in protest. Under the circumstances Senator Wheeler's rebuke to the politicians responsible for this job is too mild. Such a practice not only reflects upon the Democratic National Committee; it also reflects upon the Administration which tolerates such a loose standard of civic morality.

Mr. Young insists that his "purchase" had no connection with his prospective appearance in Washington; that the book "salesmen" did not discuss his relationship to any Federal agency. It wasn't necessary. The fact that an individual whose interests are under fire in Washington should be selected as a potentially generous donor is sufficient of itself.

The meaning of this transaction appears in Mr. Young's admission that he would have "taken soap wrappers if they had been offered" to him. Such eagerness to help clear up a party deficit is unusual. It raises a strong implication that solicitors were sent to Mr. Young's door when they believed he would be in the market for a large slice of official good will. To say the least, that sort of political morality is a strange offset to customary New Deal righteousness.

New Traffic Strategy.

The strategy in Washington's campaign against traffic accidents has taken a new turn. In addition to the actual killers and maimers, an objective now will be those motorists whose haphazard driving habits often force others into accidents. Specifically, the metropolitan police force has received orders to move sternly against all who turn from wrong lanes, who neglect hand signals, who park near busy intersections and who park double—truck drivers, especially.

Particular effort will be made to improve traffic accident records of certain areas revealed by charts compiled in the office of the traffic squad to be "danger sections." Of course, traffic conditions vary throughout the city. But nothing except a difference in law enforcement can account for the 77 per cent rise in accidents in the Second Precinct. The detection of this weak link in the Capital's traffic front well demonstrates the effectiveness of the "Kreml technique" of employing statistics in the fight against accidents.

Commissioner Hazen, in calling on the police for renewed efforts against highway crashes, has declared that this campaign will not end "with just a lot of talking." Even if anyone desired such an outcome it would be impossible. No official indifference could drown out the screaming fact that traffic accidents in the District have increased almost 40 per cent in the first half of 1937; and that 15 more persons have been killed on the streets so far this year than met death there in the same period of 1936.

The Tydings Rider.

There is only one way to suppress the evil practice of attaching "riders" to important legislative measures. That is to remove them, even if the operation entails delay or jeopardizes the passage of a major bill.

Therefore, it had been hoped by many that Congress would eliminate the "rider" attached to the District tax bill by Senator Tydings. It would have been particularly exasperating to have this pressing emergency legislation held up after all relevant differences had been settled. But the ready acceptance of the "rider" will encourage those who are willing to force their pet measures through Congress by utilizing an essentially vicious practice.

Viewed objectively, there is much to be said in favor of the Tydings rider. It does not force resale price maintenance upon States opposed to such policies. It simply strengthens the laws of those States—and there are 42 of them—that have already legalized contracts to maintain resale prices.

However, many people, including members of Congress, object to the so-called fair-trade practice laws of the States and are opposed to any Federal action that would make them more effective. The Tydings bill should have been considered independently, on its merits, even though that would have entailed further delay in passing a long overdue tax bill.

A Timely Wage Settlement.

On Wednesday the National Mediation Board announced a Nation-wide settlement of the railroad wage controversy which had resulted from the request of the so-called "non-operating crafts" for an increase in their basic rates of pay. On the same day the House Labor Committee acted to modify the wages-and-hours bill, as passed by the Senate, so as to eliminate jurisdiction of the proposed Labor Standards Board in occupations where collective bargaining is effective.

There is more than a coincidence of date between these two incidents. And if the moral of the railroad wage agreement is closely studied it will mean a far more promising wages-and-hours act than is foreshadowed by the Senate bill.

The railroad wage settlement is important in itself. It provides for a raise of 5 cents per hour, affecting nearly 300,000 employes in all except the train and engine forces. The increase in annual pay rolls for the Class I carriers is estimated at $98,000,000. The record indicates that this is the first time a wage increase of such magnitude has been reached by negotiation between the representatives of the railroads and their workers.

But in the fact that this negotiation was both speedy and amicable lies the greatest significance of the episode. The issue was first raised by the employes on March 4. On July 16 it was placed in the direct charge of Otto S. Beyer, one of the three members of the National Mediation Board, whose experience in railroad labor problems is unrivaled. A little more than a fortnight later came the settlement, resulting from well-rounded examination of the whole problem under the procedure laid down in the railway labor act.

The railroad industry has plenty of labor problems. An ugly one is pending now in the request of the five brotherhoods for a 20 per cent wage increase, to meet which would seem completely beyond the present financial resources of the carriers. But the point is that this industry has very well-developed arbitration machinery, with the good organization of the carriers and railway labor as its pillars and a governmental agency—the National Mediation Board—as the keystone of the arch which joins them.

Obviously it is desirable that an industry which has developed so excellent a mechanism of industrial peace should remain entirely independent of such general and standardizing legislation as the wages-and-hours bill. Scarcely less obvious is the fact that any and all industries which have the latent capacity to build similar mechanism for themselves should also be exempted. And that exemption, of course, is the design of the A. F. of L. amendment, adopted by the House Labor Committee this week, which would limit the jurisdiction of the proposed Labor Standards Board to occupations where collective bargaining agreements are undeveloped, inadequate or ineffective.

There is some criticism because the original inordinate pretensions of the wages-and-hours bill have been pruned until its provisions would now seem to be generally applicable only to unorganized and underprivileged workers. Such criticism should be regarded as praise for the measure now reported to the House. For it is a long step towards fascism when the State takes over from free trade unionism the fight to adjust compensation and working time to the levels which particular industries can afford.

When the State takes over that function, as Germany and Italy attest, free trade unionism is well along the road to extinction. And with the removal of that democratic force there need be no expectation that hours will remain short, or wages high. If national income proves inadequate to meet the bill, working hours will increase, and pay envelopes will become thinner. That trend can be expected, regardless of any fine declarations contained in original legislation on the subject.

"The Veriest Moonshine."

Mr. Farley has come out of the shell hole into which he retired after the Supreme Court fight and proclaims that the vanquished will not punish the victors. Such rumors were nothing but Republican propaganda—"another piece of moonshine."

But the "moonshine" about the Farley machine being turned like Juggernaut against opponents of the Administration's late court bill radiates chiefly from Gov. Townsend of Indiana. It was he who, following a recent visit to the White House, riddled the idea that Senator Van Nuys might be renominated by the Democratic Party in Indiana. For the most part the Senator had been a faithful New Dealer, but he couldn't swallow the bill to create six new justices on the Supreme Court. So he was to be punished. That was the clear implication of the Townsend interview.

Coincident with Mr. Farley's proclamation of peace, Senator Van Nuys announced his candidacy for re-election in 1938. Sunny Jim's gesture, if it is sincere, looks like a slap in the face for Gov. Townsend. What can the Governor say to this implication, straight from the Delphic Oracle, that he is merely a "Republican propagandist?"

New Subsidies For Cotton?

The present clamor for Government loans on cotton is an outgrowth of past generosity to the farmer. A few years ago the Administration set a precedent by pegging the price of cotton at 12 cents through lending operations. Now representatives of Southern States assume that it is a Federal obligation to take over cotton which cannot be marketed at approximately that price.

Fortunately the Government has been able to liquidate a large part of the cotton it acquired from the old Farm Board and from more recent experiments in price control. But the Commodity Credit Corporation still holds 1,678,000 bales as a result of the 12-cent loans made in 1934 and 1935. In view of the prospects for a large crop this year, the corporation faces a difficult task in disposing of this cotton without loss to taxpayers.

Actually, however, no one knows at this time what the outcome of the 1937 crop will be. The unofficial estimate of 14,500,000 bales may be substantially changed by weather conditions, boll weevil or other causes. In these circumstances President Roosevelt's refusal to sanction loans to arrest the current price decline is fully justified, regardless of what his ulterior motive may be. Cotton farmers are not faced by an emergency. The 12-cent loans demanded by Southern Senators would involve an uncertain element of subsidy which certainly could not be justified on top of the soil conservation benefits paid to all farm groups.

Even the special pleaders for cotton recognize the undesirability of boosting prices above the world market level by use of commodity loans. They realize that price-pegging in this country helped to stimulate production abroad and to give foreign cotton an advantage over the American product. In part that explains why the consumption of American cotton has fallen substantially below the average for the decade preceding the New Deal, while the consumption of foreign cotton has increased to a new high level.

In the face of this condition Senator George suggests Federal loans of 10 or 11 cents per pound, with additional subsidies to guarantee farmers a price of 12 cents. The aim, of course, is to retain our competitive position in the world market while granting cotton farmers a generous helping of gravy at the expense of taxpayers.

If special subsidies of this kind should be granted to cotton farmers, they could reasonably be extended to other crops. All hopes for a balanced budget would go glimmering and our entire agricultural system would again be threatened by regimentation. The President is more realistic on this point than many Congressmen who are demanding that minimum price levels be maintained by the Government. For the most part they dislike crop control from Washington. But Mr. Roosevelt rightly intimates that the Government would have to limit farm output to save itself from bankruptcy under the proposed loan policy.

There is a strong implication that the President wishes to use crop loans as a lever to push his general farm legislation through Congress. But no domestic program can regulate farm output in other countries. And in the absence of such control, restriction of acreage here would lead directly back to the handicaps that became so evident under the AAA. The most reasonable course, now that the emergency has passed, is to let cotton find its own price level.

Yacht Or Yachtsmen?

Yesterday will be memorable in the history of American sporting annals. It was not merely that the Ranger finally terminated the efforts of the well-named Endeavour II to capture the America's Cup. An even more famous piece of plate was returned to the United States in the shape of the Davis Cup, flanked by the players who have brought it back to this side after a decade's absence.

An indication that the tennis trophy, as well as that for yachting superiority, is likely to remain some while is given by the statement of Donald Budge that he has no present idea of turning professional. It may be hoped that this purpose will remain resolute, even though he will need unusual determination to resist the offers which will doubtless come to the world's outstanding player.

Except for the owners, there is already more professionalism in yacht racing than in tennis. So perhaps an eccentric suggestion, prompted by the poor showing of the British contender, may be permitted. Let Sopwith and Vanderbilt change helms, the former sailing the Ranger and the latter Endeavour II over a special course. Then we shall know more clearly what part seamanship and what part design and construction, played in the outcome.

A chemistry student of Iowa State College has discovered a gas which he claims will destroy gas masks. No doubt by time this paragraph appears in print someone will have developed a gas that will destroy gas that destroys gas masks. Science marches on!

Astronomers are a queer lot. At present they are spending all the time they can spare worrying over the moon being a few miles off course, the while the world under their feet is going to pieces.

Dr. Merriam Parries Neatly.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with some amusement your recent editorial entitled "The Road to Hell." You may be entirely right. There are those who have said that I have already arrived. It is comforting to have your authoritative assurance that I am only on the way, and perhaps not even past redemption.

It may seem—without the full record which I realize you did not have before you—that my "resentment" arose from differences of opinion or questions of fact—which I am always ready to discuss at length. But the full testimony before the Senate committee hearing clearly shows that this was not the case.

The motives and purposes of the President's committee on administrative management were being misstated or misinterpreted persistently. I had not realized that replying to repeated challenges of the democratic intentions and good faith of the President's committee on administrative management was capable of being construed as heading a movement toward the lower depths. Or that a partial report of my dog-day dialogue would furnish material for a didactic editorial in a great journal such as The Post really is.

Chicago Juries.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I rise in defense of The Post, which so fearlessly published the editorial, "Chicago's Massacre Exposed." In doing so, I feel I am expressing the sentiments of all non-capitalists and non-Fascists in America.

It seems that to Mr. J. A. Hall (who attacked The Post for its democratic writing), any verdict of any jury is the Decalogue. But let me advise him that the jury that whitewashed the recent strike massacre is the same jury that had sent to gallows eight innocent labor leaders in the Haymarket riot in the same city; the same that sent innocent Sacco and Vanzetti to the electric chair; the same that would have done the same with nine innocent Scottsboro boys, had it not been for a strong public opinion against it; the same that has kept Tom Mooney behind the bars all these years; the same that has convicted thousands of strikers for a "crime" of asking for milk for their babies. Philippines' Future.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A press dispatch from Manila says that some 50 or 60 young Filipinos in a provincial town have been sentenced to a term in jail because they have failed to report to the military authorities for duty. This is the result of the compulsory military preparation scheme that Field Marshal Douglas MacArthur has introduced among the peace-loving people of the Philippines.

Personal liberty under the Quezon-MacArthur government is becoming more and more of a fiction. We are afraid it is the prelude to a regime of absolutism and despotism which is promised for the day when the American flag is hauled down in the Philippines.

Reply To Mr. Mason.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In answer to J. D. Mason's letter of July 31, I would like to state the following: He accuses us Communists of not wanting democracy. Has he read the new Soviet constitution? In it the workers are guaranteed the right of an education, secret ballot, but most of all, the right to work and freedom of opportunity to go as high in the new Socialist society as he or she is capable. For instance, the two flights of the six young Soviet aviators demonstrates the freedom of initiative that the citizens of the U. S. S. R. have under socialism in a country led by the Communist Party. All of these fliers are sons of peasants or workers.

The Communist Party is not a revolutionary junta as Mr. Mason so pleasantly believes, but is a legal political party which believes and works toward building a society where there will be no unemployment, poverty, hunger, exploitation of man by man, or war with all of its disastrous consequences. We will try to bring this about as peaceably and above all as democratically as possible. Our main fight now is with fascism which would destroy all democracies and guarantee a society of war and bloodshed. It is the Fascists who would overthrow our democratic government and not the Communists. It is only through democracy that the Communists can attain their final goal.

Traffic Experience.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with much interest the experience of Mr. Newman H. Bailey printed in your paper. I agree with Mr. Bailey that the Traffic Department and the Traffic Court need a considerable overhauling.

Here is my experience on Saturday last:

Having driven an elderly friend from Gaithersburg, Md., to her home on B street southeast, I proceeded east to the next corner and turned north on the extra-wide Eleventh street, not observing the inadequate sign showing it to be a one-way thoroughfare. I had not gone three car lengths when two vigilants in a police car pulled away from the curb on the right and just about jammed me. Of course, I was given the usual bawling out and then taken to the hoosegow.

I followed their car and was met at the station by one of the officers who told me rudely to pull up to the curb. There I sat waiting for further directions. This officer then proceeded to go into the station-house and said nothing about following him, but in about one minute the other vigilant jumped out of his car and I got another bawling out. So I went in the station and paid my fine. During the cash transaction, I was jeered at by Officer B—— because I had remarked that I had not been in a station house before. I was then sore and asked to see the captain of the precinct.

The captain treated me with the utmost courtesy. He even guessed, as had the desk clerk, that it was Eleventh street where I was trapped. He further agreed that the street was poorly labeled and said that the Southeast Citizens Association was complaining of it. He advised me to take the matter to court, which I agreed to do. On Monday morning I proceeded to court hoping to render some service to the future victims of the traffic trap to add my protest to those of the Southeast Citizens Association. The court was to convene at 9:30 and many were present, but no judge. The 10:30 crowd arrived also and no judge. At 11:15 I found that there still was no judge and, of course, I went away forfeiting my collateral.

I consider that Washington citizens are given the cruelest deal possible and that the Traffic Department surely needs overhauling and officers be made to treat minor offenders with decency. What right, may I ask, has any servant of the taxpayer of the District of Columbia to be rude or unmannerly toward any of those who pay his salary?

American Troops In China.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please permit me to commend Representative Hamilton Fish, of New York, for his timely demand that American armed forces be withdrawn from China.

The American reading public, I am sure, will be interested to know just why we have, and are to this day, keeping a large military force in China.

Many of us remember the so-called Boxer Rebellion, which gave all the exploiting nations, especially in Europe, the opportunity to saddle poor distressed China with foreign militarism, under the pretext of guarding legations, concessions or properties of their nationals.

Since then, however, China has made wonderful strides toward white man's civilization, and to the patriotic and progressive Chinese of today, the continued presence of foreign military forces must be irksome, if not insulting, just as it would be to this country, if China kept military forces here to guard her scattered consulates and legation in Washington.

Adjournment Urged.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Adjournment of Congress should complete the list of favorable indices necessary to assure rising fall business, increasing employment, and help of the nonpolitical variety to the masses. A cessation of statements, fireside chats and proclamations from the President upon his wishes, objectives, aims and private dislikes—a real rest for the business brigands and royalists of industry—would constitute another breather. The United States could use such a break.

When Congress returns from its too-short layoff, the whole crazy cycle may be expected to begin anew: Important business sidetracked to bicker over harebrained schemes, the whims and ambitions of high-placed reformers, concoction of more excuses to alibi budget unbalance, growing debt and continuance of the spoils system.

Experience Vs. Degree.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Civil Service Commission has taken a wise step in considering practical experience in assistant engineers' examinations.

The commission possibly recognized the fact from reports furnished Senator Byrd by the procurement division of the Treasury indicating that it cost ten times more to build Resettlement homes in Virginia with college engineers than it did to build the same type of homes with practical builders.

An architect, drawing plans, needs a college education, but the man that builds from blueprints and specifications needs experience, good judgment and quick thinking to save money for the Government or to make money for a building company. A BUILDER.

Forgotten Stockholders.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When the public reads that the chairman of a large motor company received over half a million dollars in 1936, that the president of the same motor company got an equal amount and that its vice president received more than $350,000, it is not hard to understand why the workers who actually produced the motors cause so much trouble with strikes.

I am writing as an owner of stock in the company that is paying these officers this money. Like nearly all the owners of the stock in this huge concern, I do not approve any such large payments, but I am powerless to prevent it. It is all right to argue that stockholders could stop it if they got together, but this kind of talk is just poppycock. A few men, and particularly the officers, are the ones that really control the company. They even request that their salaries be kept secret!

I have felt that the worker was unjust in promoting strikes and continually begging for higher pay, my line of reasoning being based on the knowledge that no country in the world pays its workers more than the United States. But I am now ready to concede that if a president and chairman can take $1,000,000 in wages out of my company in one year, there may be something to the thought that such officers are not fair with our employes.

Also I am rather selfish. It has been the capital of the stockholders which made the company possible and it seems, in comparison, that the returns they have got in the last ten years have been meager in comparison to what the officers and laborers got. Maybe the New Deal can do something for the forgotten stockholders, or are they too few to be of any political consequence?

Misusing The Flag

IT HAS become altogether too common of late for individuals and groups to wave the American flag—both literally and figuratively—in behalf of causes in which they are interested. Conversely there have also been too many instances in which upholders of other doctrines and movements have been branded as unpatriotic and as virtual traitors to their flag and country because they differed with those who profess that theirs are the only pure and undefiled American principles.

Who is to say what is real Americanism? Who among us can claim to be the only 100 per cent Americans? Can such standards be based solely on traditionalism?

There has already arisen a reaction against this sort of thing—against labels that may be unfair as well as inaccurate. The use of the American flag in advertising has now been generally banned, if not by law, at least by good taste. People are inclined to smile when such groups as the night-shirted Ku Klux Klan set themselves up as the defenders of true Americanism. The waving of the flag for political purposes is no longer taken seriously.

Yet abuses still occur under circumstances of various kinds. The custom has grown up among strikers and picketers, as well as men who insist on their right to work, to march into possible trouble under the folds of the Stars and Stripes. Many employers also like to make a point of describing their position as the "traditional American way" with the implication that their adversaries' views are un-American. A recent instance of the former sort occurred in Brooklyn when the picketers outside the Robins Dry Dock Co. carried the American flag into action against the police when the latter were trying to break up a sit-down demonstration intended to tie up trolley cars being used by workers leaving the beleaguered plant.

This group had no more right to invoke the protection of the flag—if that was the purpose—than did their adversaries who were continuing to work. With a riot in progress the police were forced to act without regard to the flag—their sole job was to restore order. The scenes that followed were such as to bring the flag into disrepute. Real patriots could not help being aroused. Yet whose fault was this? Plainly it was due to those who sought, without vestige of right, to wrap themselves in the American flag. Disputes of this kind should be settled on their merits—without disorder, and especially without disorder under the folds of the national emblem.

Bums Of Bumblebees?

Centuries ago nature made a contract with the bumblebees of central Asia. That was long before Europe or America knew anything about bees. The contract provided that, in exchange for the nectar distilled in red clover blooms, the hairy, strong-limbed bumblebee should attend to the propagation of the clover crop, which was another of nature's Asiatic experiments. Since then red clover and the bumblebees have traveled about the world together.

Together they established colonies in Europe and America. They became so familiar and so popular that people forgot how far they had come. They seemed to have been there all the time. Only a few people realize that their continuing togetherness was owing to that millennium-old contract entered into on the plains of the Far East. That fact, however, was impressed upon the world when, about a quarter of a century ago, Australia imported some red clover but forgot to include any bumblebees in the consignment. The clover grew and blossomed, but it bore no seed.

Then somebody remembered Charles Darwin's famous experiment, in which clover blooms covered with paper sacks remained sterile, while blooms left open to the bees produced abundant seed. Australia sent for the bees and saved its clover.

Now, after all these centuries of faithful service in the fertilization of red clover, the bumblebee is in danger of being relegated to the ranks of the technologically unemployed. According to a Maryland beekeeper, the scientists are trying to produce a red clover that will make it possible for the lighter built, shorter tongued honeybee to take over the bumblebee's job as collector and distributor of the fertilizing pollen, and combine it with his own job of constructing geometrically perfect wax cells in artificial hives, and storing them with honey. The beekeeper says that clover and the bumblebee are disappearing from Maryland. His intimation of catastrophe sends us back to Darwin's theory explaining a possible disappearance of red clover. It ran like this: Some day the old maiden ladies might cease keeping cats, hence the field mice would multiply, consequently the bumblebee communities in the grass roots would be decimated, so there would be no carriers of clover pollen, and for lack of fertilization the clover would perish.

Just what happened in Maryland is not disclosed. Perhaps the bird lovers killed all the cats. Just what will happen if the hybridizers produce a red clover adjusted to the capacity of the honeybees is a matter for speculation. But our guess is that no great good can come from making a technological bum of the bumblebee.

"There Were Casualties."

IN A BIOGRAPHY of John L. Lewis, written by Cecil Carnes, there are two pages dealing with the Herrin massacre of 1922, in which 14 strikebreakers were shot by a firing squad of union men after their surrender under a flag of truce, two were hanged, and five others were taken to a cemetery and shot after being dragged along by ropes attached to an automobile.

Mr. Lewis himself formally deplored the butchery on behalf of his United Mine Workers and attempted to make it appear that the coal companies had hired secret agents to mingle with the union miners and provoke the slaughter of their own strikebreakers.

The strikebreakers were members of a union, but that union was in bad standing with the American Federation of Labor, just as Mr. Lewis' C. I. O., and this, in the opinion of Mr. Carnes, placed them outside the law. Mr. Carnes does not go that far, but by the same reasoning it would seem excusable, though perhaps indelicate, of the members of the A. F. of L. to make war on the C. I. O. today, and, in the event of a surrender under a flag of truce, shoot, hang and torture the C. I. O. men.

MR. CARNES does admit that the Herrin massacre was indelicate. True, he calls the strikebreakers scabs, but the C. I. O. people would be scabs, too, in the eyes of the A. F. of L. if, in a jurisdictional fight between the two bodies, the C. I. O. should attempt to man the jobs and run the works.

"Strikebreaking," says he, "was a risky as well as a despicable business, and that is why higher wages were paid. The very fact that operators could go on at these inflated pay schedules indicated to the miners that all their economic troubles could be obviated if the operators were less greedy and there were no shortsighted laborers to cut the collective throat of regular workers.

"But just as silicosis and tuberculosis were occupational diseases among the miners, lead poisoning, a very sudden attack with sound effects, was that of the strikebreaker. It has been human weakness, even in lawful society, to fight murder with murder, and in a strict sense, strikebreakers in the coal fields were murderers. If you help in the slaying you are in on it, and strikebreaking is, per se, evidence."

So strikebreaking is murder, punishable by murder, and a strikebreaker, under the conditions used by Mr. Carnes in the Herrin case, is anyone who works on a struck job, even though he belongs to a union hostile to the union claiming jurisdiction in the plant. This seems a dangerous belief to apply to the labor field generally in this day, with many disputes in progress between two organizations each claiming 3,000,000 members.

• • • •

"THERE WERE casualties on both sides," says Mr. Carnes, "and when the strikers finally captured some of the scabs they hanged them. It was very primitive murder—not as neat as, say, the executions of women in New York State's electric chair. But it was done just as finally. Coal mining, like starving, is primitive business."

Aside from the demure understatement contained in the phrase "there were casualties," Mr. Carnes seems to indicate a belief which, extended to the recent Little Steel strike of the C. I. O., would have resulted in the worst slaughter this country has seen since the Civil War.

Indeed, Mr. Lewis' leaders in Youngstown intimated to President Roosevelt that any attempt to operate the plant would cause terrific violence and bloodshed, and it would appear that they must have expected the C. I. O. to take the offensive, because the non-union workers, who were regular employes and not imported strikebreakers, obviously had no intention of coming outside and starting shooting. On the contrary, they were the ones who wanted protection, and if it is murder, punishable by murder, for a man to stick to his job they plainly needed protection. The retaliatory murder, of course, is not punishable.

Mr. Carnes' biography of Mr. Lewis is not official, and it is not fair to hold Mr. Lewis accountable for Mr. Carnes' views. Nevertheless, he does speak the sentiments of certain elements—how large I do not know—in the radical labor movement which has been attracted to the C. I. O.

But still he only presents a puzzle, for the general application of Mr. Carnes' idea in the present rivalry would produce general slaughter on many fronts, with the victims conscientious union men and women all.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

Letter From A Soviet Executive.

Dear Ivanoff:

Well, things are certainly booming here in Soviet Russia. We are in the midst of a great industrial revival. You can get an idea how great it is from the fact that executions have reached an all-time high. If the boom keeps on, nobody's life will be safe.

• • • •

All my subordinates are in a state of jitters, too, due to the fact that they have worked very hard and succeeded in building up the business far beyond their fondest hopes. As long as this factory was just stumbling along and getting very little business, nobody was in jeopardy, but the minute we took it over and made it a great success we became candidates for the firing squad. Nothing makes Stalin more furious than the news that an industry is so efficient it is lagging behind orders. I am beginning to think I was a sucker for being so efficient.

• • • •

Executives and engineers are being shot everywhere on account of the great industrial boom and whenever they see a rush of orders they begin making their wills and saying goodby to their friends. Some of the factories have instituted what they call farewell parties. Whenever a company makes an annual report showing record strides, the executives throw these farewell parties, knowing that they will probably be bumped off during the next quarter as wreckers of industry.

Well, I cannot write any more, as my assistant has just notified me that another tremendous order has come in which will swamp us more than ever, and I hear the phone ringing, which must be a summons from Stalin. Remember me to all, and tell everybody I died unashamed of building up the business.

Yours,

GREGORY LATVICH.

Summer Travesty

Tonight I leave for fairer shores,
Tonight I join the care-free bores
Who'll help me rock away two weeks
Upon a porch that cracks and creaks.
Four fourteen days and fourteen nights
The topic will be—appetites,
And after that—obesity,
I'm angular; they'll envy me.
Each meal they'll store their money's worth,
The while they swell in limb and girth;
I'll watch them gorge the livelong day
And lift their sun-tanned arms to pray
For miracles of alchemy,
That fourteen days again may see
Them sailing homeward sleek as swans,
And think they look like Lily Pons.

War Nobody Wants

By Frank H. Hedges.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Tokyo.

A WAR That Nobody Wants: A War That Nobody Can Win! This dual phrase best describes the sporadic clashes between Japanese and Chinese troops that began on the Hopei plains near the walls of the city of Peiping on the night of July 7, clashes that threaten at any moment to develop into major armed conflict, or an unofficial Sino-Japanese war.

Because something like 140,000 troops of the Central Army of China are now within striking distance of Peiping, because another 100,000 Chinese soldiers of the Twenty-ninth Route Army occupy the province of Hopei and none knows in which direction they may veer, because the North China garrison of the Japanese army has been swollen from its customary 7,500 men to an undetermined number, running into several tens of thousands, it is believed, this war that nobody wants and nobody can win might spring into spontaneous life at any moment.

There is one other powerful factor heading straight in the direction of grave Sino-Japanese battling now, and that is the inflamed public opinion in both of the countries concerned. The Chinese army and the Chinese masses have been fed for so long on tales of Japanese aggression—most of them quite true—that the whole nation is blazing with hatred and a desire for revenge on this empire. The Japanese public has been taught to look with contempt upon China and the Chinese, to consider them and their country a sort of appendage of the Japanese empire, created for the good of Dai Nippon, and of necessity subservient to commands from Tokyo. When, as at present, China does not complaisantly comply therewith, the reaction of the Japanese public is that China must be chastised, but in its present mood the Japanese public has no taste for such a task which, obviously, may take thousands of Japanese lives and a tremendous sum of money from a people already sorely overtaxed.

Both Japan And China Anxious To Avoid Clash.

WITH THESE tangible facts to hand, undeclared but very real war would seem inevitable, and it is inevitable but for one other vitally important factor. That is that neither the Japanese government nor the Chinese desire to engage in such a warfare if it can be honorably avoided. The will to fight simply does not exist among those charged with the shaping of national policy in both capitals, and so the possibility of eventual compromise and a peaceful settlement—or more probably only a postponement—of the second Sino-Jananese war becomes something more than a possibility.

From the Chinese standpoint, war would be disastrous to the rapid headway being made by that republic toward its own political, economic and psychological consolidation and unification. War would undoubtedly go far toward welding this psychological unity even more firmly, but the cost in the economic and other constructive fields would be too great for Chiang Kai-shek and his coworkers to pay. This is revealed by the Generalissimo's lengthy and statesmanlike message to the people of China on the eve of hostilities, but that message reveals quite as fully that the Generalissimo is ready and will fight before meekly yielding to Japanese demands incompatible with Chinese honor and national dignity.

Even if he so desired, the Generalissimo could not yield now and retain his power. If last December the Young Marshal felt compelled to kidnap Chiang Kai-shek in the hope of forcing him to pursue a stronger policy against Japan, virtually the whole of the Chinese people today would unite to drive him from office if he weakly gave way to pressure from Tokyo. Unless Japan offers some compromise of sufficient worth to placate the Chinese people, the Chinese army must try its strength against the Japanese on the field of battle. There is no third alternative.

Japanese Withdrawal Declared Difficult Now.

JAPAN, also, has gone so far in this present crisis that it would seem impossible for Tokyo to withdraw until blood has been shed. Your correspondent has good reason to believe that the original armed clashes in the neighborhood of the Marco Polo Bridge near Peiping were not planned by the general staffs of either Tokyo or Nanking, but were largely the natural result of intensely hostile troops being stationed too close together. Whichever side may have fired the first shot becomes of no importance now, in view of the tremendous repercussions that shot is having.

Japan continues to refer to the cirisis as a "local incident" and to insist that it be settled on "the spot," but the "locality" involved today is the whole length and breadth of China, and the "spot" extends from the Great Wall to below Canton, from the ports along the China Coast to the interior mountain fastnesses of Szechuan and Sinkiang. The issues involved are no longer disputes as to who shall police Hopei province and under what conditions, but the fundamental issue of the basic relationship between the empire of Japan and the republic of China—is it to be equality or lord and vassal? If war is avoided now, as is quite possible although none too probable, then that issue may be postponed; it will not have been settled.

That Japan does not desire war at this juncture seems so apparent to the observer in this country that it is difficult to understand how any other view could be entertained abroad, as it undoubtedly is in many quarters The explanation springs, it is supposed, from the past unenviable record of this empire. The Japanese pride themselves on their warlike spirit and they have given it a free rein indeed during the past half-dozen years, but the Japan of 1937 is not the same Japan as that of 1931 and 1932 The events that have intervened, both at home and abroad, have had a most sobering influence indeed. While Japan is ready to wage war against China now if it seems essential to national honor and ambition, it vastly prefers to tread the path of peace unless too great a sacrifice be involved.

Tokyo Far From Goal Of "Semi-Wartime Basis."

IN PREVIOUS dispatches I have emphasized that, under the Konoye government and for some years to come unless interrupted by war, the pivotal policy of this empire around which all other policies are being made to revolve is that of placing the nation on a "semi-wartime basis." This can only mean that the government, the war and navy offices do not consider Japan to be on such a basis at the moment and, that being true, they are most anxious to avoid major conflict until this "semi-wartime basis" is achieved.

Every sen and yen that the Japanese people can earn and that can be diverted to the national treasury is needed for the achievement of this goal. The tremendous cost of genuine fighting in China now appals the War Office and the public. The money, they realize, could be spent to so much better advantage in building up a stronger nation in both the military and the economic sense.

There is also some apprehension in many quarters that Japanese morale has become lax and that "Yamato Damashii"—the Spirit of Japan—is not what it once was, and so must be carefully nurtured back to its old vigor. With this view your correspondent cannot agree. What has happened, as is inevitable, is that the character and manifestation of the Japanese spirit has changed somewhat to accord with the natural changes that time and evolution bring. The conservative Japanese cannot perceive this, however, and so he seeks to accomplish the impossible task of striving to put Japanese psychology back into a medieval feudal dress. He is foredoomed to failure.

Those who think that the Spirit of Japan is in the slightest impaired need but to observe how the whole nation has taken the present serious and distinctly unwelcome crisis. All political differences have been forgotten; Japanese finance and industry have placed themselves unreservedly at the disposal of government without thought of the balance sheet; the mass public has no idea other than that of supporting the government without question in whatever policy it sees fit to pursue now in North China.

Seldom in all of Japan's history has there been so remarkable and so dramatic a demonstration of the fundamental oneness of the Japanese as a people, as a race. From the national standpoint Japanese psychology is primarily a survival into this modern age of tribal psychology, and in this emergency the 60,000,000 of Japanese have reacted as would the members of a tribe in which the individual is as nothing and the welfare of the tribe is everything. Without the tribe the individual ceases to exist.

Diary Of A Modern.

THERE IS NO more engaging department of literature than that which concerns itself with the journal or the personal record. Everyone, of course, is endowed with a desire to spy upon the other person's private life, but deeper than this lies the instinct upon which the final test of artistic creation is based.

When one has felt that a painting, a symphony, or a book, a dictatorship, a friendship, or a clippership, a sea, a tree, or a bee—when one has felt that any of these possesses that universal appeal and that unity which pleases without concept, then one is constrained to the question, "What of the creator of this book, or this clipper, or this bee? Out of what experience has sprung this new thing with life of itself?" This esthetic law, then, may be the justifying basis of the reader's natural interest in a diary.

IN THE CASE of Elizabeth Etnier's "On Gilbert Head," there are eleven additional justifications of interest; Elizabeth Etnier, the sea, Maine, Stephen and love, flowers, an island, a baby, a yacht, Herby, storms, and Thomas Hardy, in that order of importance. For this is Betsy Etnier's journal of three pulsing years passed on an island off Bath, Maine. She and Stephen, the young and eminent New England painter, bought Gilbert Head, a small ancient island with a dilapidated house on it. Here they began a new life exempt from public haunt, and here they came to love the society of gigantic spruce trees, sudden squalls, wheelbarrows, books, and each other.

To restore the house, to explore the "gullies, ravines, steep cliffs, sudden summits, and rocky open spaces with breast-high bushes (scarlet huckleberry and young oaks, gloriously golden)", to live in hot sun and bright haze and clean fog, to cruise and worry and have some friends—these were the projects that captured the eager heart of Elizabeth Etnier. Who could not keep a garden or a journal or some species of creation in such an atmosphere?

• • • •

THE JUSTIFICATIONS of the book listed above explain the engrossing intimacy of the chronicle. It is Mrs. Etnier's book, of course, and first interest is in her. She must be a remarkable woman to have such an inordinate capacity for enjoyment. Hers is the joy of anticipation, of reflection, of seeking. Her song is made of unpremeditated notes, sad and joyous by caprice. Next comes the sea, the physically fathomable Atlantic off Gilbert Head, but eternally unfathomable in its incessant wash over the men and women who come to live with it. The sea rolls through the book steadily but unpretentiously, and its moods are often the author's. Then comes Maine, the real Maine which even the "Vacationland" on its numberplates cannot destroy, the Maine of exuberant spring and hazy Indian summer.

Stephen Etnier is a painter to the world, but he is also lover to Elizabeth. His love of the sea and ships, his petulancy and quixotic impetuousness, and his eagerness to make his wife's journal a piece of art ("Put that in the book, Betsy") make him a well-defined character. Robert P. Tristram Coffin and a strange "Herby" slide through the journal too, with Herby's comfortable and scholarly tastes acting as neat foils for Elizabeth's zest and illusion.

• • • •

THEN THERE IS the author's garden, with its trials and successes, her baby Stephanie ("Next to Stephen I love Stephanie best"), the yacht and the storms. And Thomas Hardy. I don't know whether the author knows how much of Hardy is in her book. She speaks of her enthusiasm for the novels, and of how she feels like Eustacia Vye to the Maine natives. But it is not pathetic non sequitur, it seems to me, to say that the feeling is appreciably deeper. Her descriptive style is direct and economically shaded, as is Hardy's; and with all the gayety and pleasantness in the book, the author seems to be ever aware of the possibility of sudden tragedy. Perhaps the point is labored; the reader may decide for himself.

This, then, is "On Gilbert Head," by Elizabeth Etnier—an intimate journal of a healthy mind amid healthy things, a simple setting-down on paper of love and flowers and storms in Maine. There are no pretensions to great literature in the book, any more than there are in Pepys. But it is cleanly written and eminently readable; what else could anyone want?

Incidentally, Mayor Hoan was not in Milwaukee when the raids took place . . . How about a book entitled "A Raid I Never Made," by the Mayor himself?

HOUGHTON MIFFLIN Company have postponed the publication of "Massachusetts: A Guide to its Places and People" . . . What are the tourists supposed to do until that time, just wander around in the wilderness of Massachusetts and take their chances?

Tom McCarthy

Visit To A Hobo "Jungle."

DENVER, Colo., Aug. 5.—I left Colorado Springs regretfully, but I felt that it was time to head through the Rockies for Salt Lake City. I went back to Denver, intending to hitch out on a freight. I arrived at night, looked for a place to sleep and recalled the spacious park in front of the State Capitol building.

TOM McCARTHY.

The park was deserted and, if it had not been so cold, I might have found a good night's sleep on one of the heavy wire benches. The moon rose behind the white outlines of the State Capitol, weaving strange patterns on the lawn under the trees. It was a beautiful night; but it was cold, and my raincoat was scant protection.

I twisted and turned on the bench, wished that I could fall asleep and cursed those fine Colorado nights, which make sleeping a pleasure . . . under three blankets.

A well-dressed man stopped by the bench on which I was endeavoring to sleep and, noting that I was awake, he asked me if it wasn't pretty cold. I told him that it was. He advised me to find a place in the little booth across the street, intended as a waiting room for street car riders. I thanked him for his advice, and went across the street.

The glass enclosed booth had room for about four sleepers on the bench stretched about the walls. When I entered, three tramps had already monopolized most of the seating space. With the addition of myself, the waiting-room reached capacity, and the young couple seated along the wall, moved out.

• • • •

I HADN'T REALIZED until then that, as a tramp, itinerant workman, or what have you, I was traveling in style. I had a knapsack and a rain coat.

"Are you the guy I saw over in the park?" one of the young tramps asked, rising to a seated position.

I told him that I was, and he said that he'd been standing over there, envying me my raincoat. With an addition to their ranks, the tramps sat up and a conversation began.

"I wish I had that raincoat of yours," one of them said. "It sure would help to keep out the cold on a night like this. But, then I wish I had a lot of things."

He was a young man, somewhere in his twenties, and he was dressed only in a shirt and very dirty trousers.

"I wish I could get cleaned up," he said, "and had some clean clothes."

"Where have you been?" I asked him.

He told me that he'd been down to Colorado Springs, and had there been separated from his buddy. He didn't have a job or a place to eat, so he'd slept in the jail and obtained breakfast there. Right then I understood why he was on the bum, and why he wanted to stay on the bum, despite his desire for a raincoat, a shave, and clean clothes.

Instead of going out and looking for a job in Colorado Springs, he'd gone to the jail . . . to sleep and get a handout. Jobs were easily obtained in Colorado Springs. I had obtained two, only a few hours after arriving, and had been informed that the local employment agency couldn't supply all the demands for laundry workers, bartenders and waiters. With the tourist season in full swing, men were scarce, and jobs easily found.

"HAVE YOU LOOKED for work here in Denver?" I asked him.

"Oh, you can get work on the railroad, as common labor," he said, "but they work you like dogs. I'd rather bum." He was a strong enough looking fellow, but there was no doubt about it, he would "rather bum."

"Where are you headed for?" I asked one of the other tramps, a young fellow with a swarthy face and a straggling mustache.

"We're going to the Coast," he said, pointing to his buddy, who had dropped back to sleep. "We had some money a few days ago, but all he would do was spend it. Instead of getting his clothes out of hock, and going on to the Coast, all he wanted to do was to go to movies. While we had the money, all we did was drink and go to shows. Now he's waiting for some money from his grandmother. Then we're going to clean up and go out with one of the travel bureaus."

The travel bureaus, I learned, were agencies which acted as middlemen for parties desirous of sharing expenses in going to the West Coast. I was told that for ten dollars, you could ride with someone "as far as Los Angeles."

"Why don't you hop a freight, and save the money?" I asked him.

"This way is easier," he said. "All we're going to do is to pay the dollar registration, and then when we almost get to San Francisco we're going to take a run-out powder on the guy we're riding with."

"You mean you're not going to pay the ten bucks for riding with him?"

"Naw, all the bureau cares about is the dollar registration and, if we can get away with it, that's our good luck."

I learned that they wouldn't work. They lived on handouts from the missions. When they arrived in a strange town, they voluntarily spent the night in jail. Their conversation was mostly to compare notes about the better missions. They told me where one could get a meal without questions being asked, and where you would have to attend church in order to rate the handouts. Their sole boasts were of petty chiseling.

If they had made a grab for my raincoat, I think I'd have respected them more, but they just watched me enviously, when I arose and left at dawn. Crooks and petty chiselers, they had about as much courage as debilitated earthworms.

I COULDN'T GET much satisfaction down at the hobo "jungle" as to what time the freight went out toward Salt Lake City. All of the 'boes were drunk, save for one young man who looked like a farm lad. And he didn't know the train schedule.

They have a small "jungle" near the Denver yards. It may be within the actual yard limit. I crossed the tracks and, over the brow of the little hill, in shadow of which they build their fires and cook their food. As I arrived, a short, strongly built boy of foreign appearance was having a verbal battle with a tall colored man called "Slim."

"Shorty, Ah'll break you in two," Slim was saying.

I squatted above the "jungle" on the hill and asked when the next freight went out to Salt Lake. Shorty, threatened with being broken in two, was glad of the opportunity to rush up the little slope and answer my questions. Unfortunately, like his pugnacious buddy "Slim," he, too, was very drunk.

He couldn't help me out very much. He thought one went out in three hours. "Slim" came back into the argument by calling up that "Shorty" was a liar, and that no freight went out till night. A couple of 'boes put in their information and it was all contradictory. They were all, save for the young man who looked like a farm boy, in the last stages of a good drunk. He sat off to one side, with his own small fire, cooking something in a can.

"Sorry, we can't help you much," 'Shorty' said, "but we ain't movin' out for a while, and haven't checked on the time. We been havin' a little party here," he explained, waving at the 'boes sprawled on the ground.

Unable to get any information at the "jungle," which in another half hour would lapse into collective unconsciousness, I went up to the highway, to thumb my way out of town.

New CottonPicker Takes White Bolls, Leaves the Green

By the Associated Press.

A cotton picker designed to pick up the ripe, white bolls and leave the others alone has been patented, the patent office said yesterday, by Charles H. White, of Moline, Ill.

The eye pays no attention to green bolls, the inventor told the patent office. Light cast by a green boll is absorbed and the machine does not respond.

But when the boll is white, the light is reflected and an eye signals an electric hand to reach out.

The hands of the machine are moving belts studded with small metal teeth to pull the fiber out of the boll and carry it to a container much like the long bags which cotton pickers drag behind them.

Reich May Purge Famed Art Works

New York, Aug. 5 (AP).—Art authorities here said today that Nazi Germany's purge of "modern" art, if carried out as indicated, would extend to every corner of the German nation and affect important works of world-wide reputation.

Once a stronghold of Dada and surrealism, Germany has ordered the removal from public galleries of all art conflicting with the principles recently enunciated by Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler, who denounced the confusion, distortion and other characteristics associated with the more radical modern schools.

Mead Asks Kent, Critic of Stamps, To 'Design Some'

By the United Press.

If Rockwell Kent, American artist, doesn't like United States postage stamps, let him design some himself instead of denouncing recent issues as "thoroughly offensive," Chairman James M. Mead (Democrat), New York, of the House Postoffice and Post Roads Committee, challenged yesterday.

Kent has written to Postmaster General Farley condemning commemorative postage stamps under the New Deal. He described the recent stamp commemorating the ordinance of 1787 as "probably the ugliest and most thoroughly offensive postage stamp that has ever been issued by any government."

Infantile Paralysis Increase Reported

By the Associated Press.

The Public Health Service reported yesterday the number of infantile paralysis cases increased from 275 to 324 in the two weeks ended July 31.

Officials said the number of cases was not unusual, was not epidemic and there was no feeling of alarm. They described the increase as "seasonal." Poliomyelitis, or infantile paralysis, is most prevalent in hot weather.

Increases in the number of cases were noted particularly in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Kentucky. There were sharp decreases in Oklahoma and Arkansas.

Controlled Currency Expansion Predicted

By the Associated Press.

Robert Harriss, New York businessman, said yesterday "controlled expansion" of the currency was inevitable.

In testimony before a Senate Agriculture subcommittee, Harriss said that eventually currency must be issued against the Treasury's sterilized gold reserve, and added: "The sooner the better." The witness said he favored creation of the monetary authority proposed in a bill by Senator Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma.

Election Recount to be Demanded in Delegate Race

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Aug. 5.—George W. Herring, of Woodbridge, who was defeated in Tuesday's Democratic primary for the nomination to the House of Delegates from Stafford and Prince William counties by Frank P. Moncure, incumbent, announced today that he would ask for a recount and would contest the election of his opponent.

Herring, a former general assemblyman, said he would base his contest action on alleged irregularities which reportedly occurred in the Tuesday primary in Stafford County. Herring said he would challenge between 100 and 150 ballots cast by persons who, he asserted, voted for Gov. Alfred M. Landon, Republican nominee, in the last Presidential election.

Returns received in Fredericksburg gave Moncure a majority of 30. Herring stated that figures in his possession show the majority was 24.

New Addition Supplies Breeze For Shoreham

Cool Winds Blow Onto New Terrace Spot From Park.

By Chanticleer

A new addition has been made to the Shoreham's Terrace, in case you aren't keeping up with what's going on—and just to put a new angle on the socalled after-dark business, this addition is for the use of daytime diners. For luncheons and cocktails, with awnings overheard to guarantee full value from the Rock Creek park breeze.

As far as can be determined now, you can go to the Shoreham at the crack of dawn and remain most of the night, if you choose. A sort of chunk of Miami in our midst.

American Airlines Set a New Record

During July American Airlines, Inc., carried 33,333 paid passengers, an all-time high for commercial air traffic, C. R. Smith, president of the company, announced yesterday.

In the first six months of the present year American Airlines carried 31.7 per cent of the 464,068 passengers transported by the commercial air lines of the United States, it was pointed out.

The introduction of giant Flagship Skysleepers on its Southern transcontinental route and 21 passenger planes on other major routes during the last year, Smith said, is chiefly responsible for gains.

Group Devises 51 Plugs for Tax Loopholes

closures, was that little tax evasion but a great deal of tax avoidance had been discovered; that the present loss of revenue was small but that widening use of the devices endangered the revenue future of the Treasury, and that the burden of taxation had in many cases been unfairly shifted to those least able to pay.

Only 374 of the 4,457 returns in this class showed taxable income—less than 9 per cent. Their combined taxable income was only $5,000,000—less than 10 per cent of the total net income of the group. The total tax paid was $1,695,000—about 3 per cent of the aggregate net income. The other 4,083 personal holding companies in 1934 paid no tax whatever.

Procedure Outlined.

To remedy this situation the committee then outlined the following treatment for domestic personal holding companies:

1. Elimination of the present deduction allowed under section 102, where a taxpayer may use a penalty tax on undistributed profits, improperly accumulated, as a deduction for the regular personal holding company surtax.

2. Restriction of the unlimited deduction allowed corporations for charity contributions to a 15 per cent deduction on net income—the same as on private individuals.

3. Elimination of unlimited deductions for losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets.

Since the revenue act of 1934, personal holding companies have been liable for a special surtax on undistributed profits.

In 1934, 4,457 personal holding company returns were received. For those 12 months and the first six months of 1935, the aggregate personal holding company net income was $53,000,000.

Heretofore individuals could transfer income-producing investments to a personal holding company and obtain the benefit of deducting capital net losses denied him as an individual.

4. Elimination of the 20 per cent deduction allowed on the excess of adjusted net income over the amount of dividends received from other personal holding companies.

Rental Receipts Included.

5. Elimination of deduction allowed personal holding companies for indebtedness incurred before January 1, 1934—a source of escape for millions due in taxes.

Rental receipts, exempted in previous acts in connection with a personal holding company, are now to be included, unless they constitute 50 per cent or more of the company's gross income. Previously, a personal holding company could evade taxes under section 351 by having 21 per cent invested in rents. Now bona fide real estate corporations will be protected, and the loophole closed whereby corporations got around the condition that 80 per cent of gross income must be derived from royalties, dividends, etc.

7. Income received by a corporation from an estate or trust, and gains from sale of such trusts, hereafter is to be included in gross income to determine whether the company shall be classed as a personal holding company.

8. A clarifying change in language has been added, making it clear that sources of income must include gains from exchange of stocks as well as from the sale of stocks.

9. Gains from future transactions in commodities with an exemption for bona fide hedging transactions made in good faith by those actively engaged in commodities businesses were added as sources of income to determine whether a corporation is a personal holding company.

10. A change was suggested to keep a corporation, once established in the personal holding company class, there until the sources of its gross income have changed by providing that if gross income in a tax year equals 80 per cent or more of the company's total gross income, the gross income test thereafter shall be 70 per cent of such investment income until such income falls below 70 per cent for three consecutive years.

Fake Corporations Hit.

11. Inclusion of convertible securities to determine whether a personal holding company is owned by five or less persons was suggested.

12. Inclusion of stock owned by the same manner.

13. Inclusion of stock owned by a person's partner in determining ownership of stock by that person.

14. The drastic reduction of the personal holding company's tax advantage by changing the graduated rate, now from 8 per cent on the first $2,000 up to 48 per cent, to from 65 per cent on undistributed net income under $2,000 and 75 per cent above that.

15. Smashing of fake corporations which actually are incorporated yachts, racing stables, etc., operated at artificial losses by deducting for losses that actually are ordinary expenditures for upkeep, was suggested in a clause that through a number of tests makes only bona-fide farms, racing stables, etc., exempt from direct taxation if actual losses are incurred.

16. Tax avoidance by movie stars and others who have incorporated personal talents in personal holding companies, paid small holding company taxes and small income taxes on salary drawn from such companies, received attention in a recommendation including contracts for personal services of any person owning 25 per cent or more of securities constituting outstanding stock, in the 80 per cent test.

Other Changes Urged.

17-24. Eight suggested changes disallowing losses between two corporations in various manners, heretofore accepted as deductions on income, and often established as merely exchanges of stock, or reciprocal sales for artificial losses.

25. An artificial deduction for interest and business expense was hit by a suggestion disallowing deductions of "debtors" in personal holding companies who worked together to establish deductions through accrued interest.

26. Repeal of the $1,000 exemption now granted multiple trusts which accumulate income.

27-60. The recommendations for complete and drastic taxation of foreign personal holding companies through including undistributed adjusted net income of such companies as gross income for individuals who are American residents or citizens, with numerous deduction eliminations and added surtaxes.

41-46. Suggestions and criminal penalties to be added to existing law to inforce the previous sections and to make submission of complete information on personal holding companies supposedly foreign-owned, available to the Treasury.

47-51.—Legislation subjecting nonresident aliens to normal taxes and surtaxes on incomes of more than $21,600 annually in place of the present 10 per cent withholding tax.

Motor Arrests Soar as Safety Crusade Begins

All Precincts to Get Orders to Put Campaign Under Way.

the first of this year. He demanded stricter enforcement, stressing infractions which contribute to injuries and property damage.

Arrests Promised.

Of these, he said, failure to give the right of way to another motorist is, perhaps, the most serious. Any driver observed turning from a wrong lane, Capt. Miller said, should be arrested and forced to post collateral.

He pointed out that the Third Precinct carries approximately 19 per cent of all city traffic.

Motorists who drive to the left of street car loading platforms also will come under the new safety policy. Although in many instances, this is not a violation of the law, officials agree that the practice of driving inside a loading zone contributes to pedestrian hazards.

In line with announced intentions to curb right-of-way infractions, Judge Edward M. Curran, in Traffic Court yesterday, warned taxi drivers they could expect no mercy in this type of violation. Lecturing Rafael Sistoza, a cab driver, of 2413 Eighteenth street northwest, Judge Curran said:

"It is high time you cab drivers began to realize that there are other persons on the street besides yourselves. Why don't you try giving other motorists a chance?"

Sistoza was found guilty of the offense, but Judge Curran suspended sentence until tomorrow. The taximan was cited before Traffic Court on the complaint of Representative Joe Hendricks (Democrat), of Florida. Sistoza, the Representative said, struck his car at Connecticut avenue and L street northwest.

Meantime William H. Kendricks, 60, of 1359 B street southeast, was in Emergency Hospital last night suffering undetermined back injuries received in a freak accident at Eleventh and G streets northwest.

Kendricks was patching the sidewalk on the southwest corner when he was knocked down by an automobile which had been struck by a street car which took a wrong switch.

A westbound street car, operated by James W. Kendall, 50, of 514 Lamont street northwest, made a left turn striking a car driven by Dr. Richard K. Thompson, 45, of 4843 Woodley lane northwest.

Kendall told police he hit the switch and the car swerved before he could stop. The street car was en route to the Treasury.

Thompson, in an effort to avoid the street car struck Kendricks, who was treated by a doctor at Woodward & Lothrop's and then taken to the hospital. Police made no arrests.

Birth-Control Fight Will Be Taken to Court

Society Woman and Aide Plead Innocent in Boston.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Aug. 5.—Striking what police said they hoped would be a death blow to the Massachusetts Birth Control League, authorities prepared tonight for prosecution of its president and an associate.

Mrs. Leslie D. Hawkridge, Boston society woman and president of the league, and Miss Caroline Davis, arrested on warrants charging them with "illegally advertising contraceptives," pleaded innocent in District Court today. They were released in their own recognizance for a hearing August 26.

They demanded of the court, and were successful in having stricken from the complaint, one portion which charged they furnished information about abortions.

Four Warrants Refused.

Applications for warrants for four others, Dr. Illia Galleani, prominent Boston woman's physician, Lorraine Campbell, of Boston; Morice Biscoe, of Newton, and Frederika Williams, of Brookline, were refused.

Judge Charles L. Carr said he declined to issue warrants against them because police "did not actually see them send out mail or literature, and under advice of counsel these people made no admissions."

On the other hand, Judge Carr said, Mrs. Hawkridge and Miss Davis "admitted sending out literature in the mail."

The league received its first blow several weeks ago when Salem police raided a clinic in that city and arrested several persons, who were fined and appealed to Superior Court.

Clinics to Close.

Raids in fashionable Brookline and Boston this week were followed by an announcement by the league's executive board that it would close clinics in Worcester, Springfield, New Bedford and Fitchberg pending a court decision on the league's operations.

Dr. Galleani, one of the women against whom Judge Carr refused to issue a warrant today, was arrested as a result of the Brookline raid and pleaded innocent in Brookline District Court yesterday to a charge of "unlawfully exhibiting and offering for sale drugs, medicine and instruments intended to prevent conception." She was released in $500 for a hearing August 19.

Smokescreen Brings Arrest of Motorist

Zeph Moore, colored, 29, of 141 P street northwest, was held for the grand jury yesterday on $1,000 when he was arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage on a smokescreen charge.

Moore was arrested on a warrant by James W. Rogers, of the Treasury Alcohol Tax Unit.

Tariff Minimized As Political Issue

The tariff "as a general issue is not likely to divide the political parties in a national campaign," William S. Culbertson, foreign trade expert, declared last night in an address before the Junior Board of Commerce.

Indorsing in principle the trade agreement policy of the Administration, Culbertson said:

"It is sound politically from the standpoint of both political parties and should therefore be supported as a non-partisan national policy."

Spanish Loyalists Slaughter Moors in Revenge for Mutilation of Comrades

Rebels Trapped By Strategem, Put to Bayonet

By the United Press.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish frontier, Aug. 5.—Loyalists won their first major victory in the Albarracin sector today, government sources reported. The attack was inspired by a desire for vengeance against Moorish soldiers who had mutilated loyalists in a previous encounter.

Using bayonets, daggers and dynamite grenades, the loyalists wreaked havoc among the Moors in a battle for the village of Arroyo Frio, captured recently by nationalists.

There the government, reinforced by fresh troops from Valencia, launched an attack in which loyalist forces succeeded in climbing the difficult heights and dislodging the defenders.

Moors Hurled Back.

The nationalist commander brought up reinforcements in a counter-attack, but the loyalists were well prepared. The first wave of Moors suffered heavy losses under machine-gun fire and a barrage of dynamite bombs.

Then the loyalists threw caution to the winds, disregarding the orders of their officers. Retreating slightly to the second line of trenches, they allowed the Moors to occupy the first position.

As soon as the Moors were entrenched, the loyalists infantry charged.

Eyewitnesses said the hand-to-hand fighting became a massacre.

Santander near Famine.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Aug. 5 (AP).—Reports came today from both sides in the Spanish civil war that Santander, last important government-held city on the Bay of Biscay coast, faced a crisis.

Insurgent leaders said deserters told them Santander suffered under the squeezing of land and sea blockades. There was a movement to surrender, the deserters told insurgents, and the shortage of food approached famine conditions.

Advocates of surrender and anarchists rioted in the streets almost daily, the deserters said.

6 U. S. Fliers, Safe, Arrive at David

Panama, Panama, Aug. 5 (AP).—Six Army fliers whose airplane crashed late Tuesday in western Panama during a storm, reached David, 205 miles from here, today. They were brought out of the mountains by Indian guides.

The men escaped by parachute from their plane. None was injured.

The fliers were list as Lieut. T. J. Schofield, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Corp. C. M. Brooks, Ashland, Va.; Corp. N. D. Hagins, Johnstown, Pa.; Private A. A. Forest, Athens, Ga.; Private N. C. Hill, Edeville, Pa., and Private G. W. Vail, Towanda, Pa.

Wrecked Steamer Ordered Beached

London, Aug. 5 (AP).—The captain of the Netherlands steamer Maaskerk, which struck Brenton Rock today off Cape Palmas, Africa, radioed tonight he had decided to beach the ship to prevent its total loss.

There was no indication the ship's passengers were in any immediate danger. The captain ordered them to the lifeboats after the steamer struck the rock. The number of passengers was not known here. The Maaskerk, a 4,452-ton vessel, was homeward bound from Lagos, Nigeria.

Army's New Substratosphere Plane

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Above is the Army's substratosphere plane in which sea-level atmospheric conditions are maintained in the cabin while the ship cruises at altitudes ranging to 25,000 feet.

By the Associated Press.

Dayton, Ohio, Aug. 5.—Army pilots put the Air Corps' new substratosphere plane through its paces today high above Wright Field, but results of the test were kept secret.

Differentiating the huge all-metal monoplane from other ships is its sealed cabin, in which sea-level comfort is maintained while flying at altitudes ranging to 25,000 feet.

Officers announced exhaustive tests will be conducted to learn what chances are necessary in planes to make them adaptable for flying in altitudes above ordinary atmospheric pressure where the use of oxygen is required.

Both the cabin and engines of the "flying laboratory" are supercharged, Army men said, while the plane speeds along 5 miles above the earth to permit operation similar to that at 12,000 feet, where the average pilot or passenger would experience no discomfort.

At Washington Army aviators said increased speed and greater invulnerability to attack are the chief tactical advantages expected from the plane.

Officers say giant bombers and pursuit ships flying at abnormally high altitudes and maneuvering solely by instruments, far beyond the range of visual observation, will reduce the effectiveness of anti-aircraft gunnery.

Britain to Let Chinese Float Loan in London

Morgan Syndicate to Help Raise $100,000,000; Not for War, Says Kung.

By the Associated Press.

London, Aug. 5.—The Chinese embassy announced tonight Dr. H. H. Kung, finance minister, had reached "agreement in principle" for the flotation of a Chinese government loan of £20,000,000 ($100,000,000) in London.

Dr. Kung, in Paris, declared the loan must "not under any circumstances" be considered a war loan, although China is faced with the threat of war with Japan.

American, French and Belgian financiers had shown much interest in the loan, said an embassy spokesman, and it was planned to raise the money through a banking syndicate of which J. P. Morgan is a member. Part might be raised by general subscription, the spokesman said.

He declared some details remained to be worked out, but the loan would be secured on revenues of China's customs tariff. He indicated it would be used largely to refund old loans at lower interest rates.

Has Diplomatic Power.

He said the British government had given its consent, "because without its consent there would be no loan."

Before going to London Dr. Kung spent some time in the United States. He was China's representative at the coronation of King George VI. He is vice premier as well as finance minister of the Nanking regime.

He left London just before the loan negotiations were made public and today was in Paris, where he has arranged to confer with Premier Camille Chautemps. He said he held "diplomatic as well as financial" powers from his government.

Discussions of the loan, he said, were opened well before Chinese and Japanese began fighting in North China, July 7. He said the loan would run for 30 years, but he declined to disclose the interest rate.

May Settle Dispute.

Dr. Kung, alumnus of Oberlin College and Yale University, declared his belief China was "in just as good financial position to stand a war as Japan." But he went on to say he thought there was a "fifty-fifty chance" of settling the difficulties of the two powers by peaceful means.

"The United States can hardly declare her neutrality in a war between China and Japan," Dr. Kung continued, "because it is obvious to the whole world that Japan has broken the terms of the nine-power treaty (of 1922), which America signed."

Dr. Kung said the loan had been suggested by British bankers and had not been sought originally by his government.

It was understood the money would remain in London to be drawn on as the Chinese government required it.

Doctors Wait Mother's Death To Save Child

Will Have 8 Minutes for Operation After Woman Succumbs.

temperature today was 104, and she was growing weaker.

"The child will live for eight minutes after life has left the mother," one of the doctors said. "We will have eight minutes to save it."

Mrs. Boccassini entered the hospital a week ago. After she sank into a coma two days ago, the doctors notified her husband. It was understood by them that he objected to any operation. One reason he gave was that she had suffered so much he did not wish to have her mutilated.

Judge Rules for Baby.

Doctors asked G. Coe Farrier, an assistant city solicitor, for legal advice and he in turn appealed to Judge Harry E. Kalodner in common pleas court who told the doctors the operation could be performed after the expectant mother died.

"Even an unborn babe has its rights," Judge Kalodner said. "If the doctors deferred to the father's objections it would be tantamount to condemning that unborn child to death. 'Thou shalt not kill' is still the law of the land.

"Such an operation might be considered in effect an autopsy and I know there is a law also which prohibits autopsies without the consent of kin in cases where there is no presumption or suspicion of crime.

"But that unborn child has legal rights, too," he concluded. "If the State has the legal power to destroy it also has the legal power to create."

would be the first great struggle of the war, as it will be the first time veteran Chinese central government divisions have engaged the Japanese.

War May Expand, Warning.

Nanking (Friday), Aug. 6 (AP).—An official Japanese intimation the undeclared Japanese-Chinese war might be extended as far as the Yellow River was received here today by foreign diplomats.

Foreign consuls at Tientsin reported the Japanese consul general there had called on their senior member at the instance of the Japanese army to make this declaration:

"The continued concentration of Chinese troops north of the Yellow River means hostilities in that region, and therefore the Japanese military suggests that foreigners in that area be warned accordingly."

(If the Japanese do establish the Yellow River as the boundary of their penetration into North China, it will mean extension of their area of operations some 300 miles to the west, about 350 miles to the southwest and about 150 miles to the southeast. Conquest of all territory north and east of the Yellow River would enlarge the area they dominate in North China four or five-fold.

(Such conquest would give Japan control of most of the five provinces previously named in Japanese plans for an autonomous regime in North China, Hopei, Chahar, Suiyuan, Shansi and Shantung.)

Considers Protest.

Tokyo, Aug. 5 (AP).—Domei, Japan's national news agency, said tonight the government was considering making formal representations to the United Staes concerning a reported scheme to enlist American aviators for the Chinese army.

Domei referred to Los Angeles disptaches quoting Russell L. Hearn as declaring 182 American pilots were ready to fly Chinese war planes.

The Tokyo government, according to Domei, was ready to call Washington's attention to the "unfavorable effect" on Japanese-American relations of such a development.

Japanese army officers for years have been telling newspapers of their dislike for the fact that numerous American aviators were helping train young pilots for the Chinese air force, but it has never reached the stage of diplomatic action.

Domei said officials here regarded Hearn's plan as contrary to the spirit of the United States neutrality act and also not in conformity with recent statements of the American government expressing hopes for a peaceful settlement of the North China crisis.

(In Los Angeles Hearn, described as formerly associated with Marshall Chang Tso-lin, one-time war lord of Manchuria, was quoted as saying it was against the law to recruit fliers for China in the United States but that "if Americans wish to go to China and then enlist there is nothing to stop them.")

Sex Slayer Blamed For Murder of Girl

Renfrew, Ontario, Aug. 5 (Canadian Press).—Authorities decided today that Ethel Hedderwick, 13, whose battered body was found in a pasture near Renfrew Tuesday, was the victim of a sex slaying.

Dr. E. R. Franklin announced after an autopsy that she had been attacked and beaten to death. The girl started from her home Tuesday morning for Carswells Hill, about a mile away, to pick cherries. Her body was found at nightfall by John Comba, who stumbled over it while hunting for her.

Missionaries in China Fear War as Blow to Christianity

Safety Measures Drafted for Thousands of Americans as U. S. Investments and Institutions Are Endangered.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai, Aug. 5.—American missionaries tonight expressed fears generations of effort and millions of dollars spent to spread the Christian gospel might be nullified by Japanese domination of North China.

As Japanese columns forged southward through the Hopei-Chahar zone of undeclared war, a spreading emergency was reflected among American residents.

In Shanghai, United States Consul General Clarence E. Gauss drafted safety measures for the 4,000 Americans here and others scattered throughout the surrounding provinces.

A broadly representative American residents emergency committee was formed to insure protection for American natoinals, arrange for their concentration if conditions became much worse or even evacuation in case of need.

American consular officials in other Chinese cities were taking similar precautions. The consulate general here assumed charge of coordinating the plans, establishing communications and issuing orders should a concentration near the coast be deemed necessary.

A survey of mission and educational enterprises in northern Hopei—where the Japanese already are in complete control—disclosed almost universal gloom among their American administrators.

Missions involved include the Methodist, Presbyterian, Seventh Day Adventist, American Board Mission and Catholic.

An investment of at least $10,000,000, much of it from United States church collection pla' s, and millions of dollars for annual expenses are represented in Hopei Province.

American missionaries expressed belief the Japanese would demand "100 per cent contr in Hopei Province and might even extend their sphere further south.

In such a case, they said, Chinese Christian physicians, and professors in the varied religious, educational and medical institutions might suffer from harsh suppressive efforts, "including jail or worse."

700-Ft. Fall Survivor Is Rescued From Ledge

Morley, Alberta, Aug. 5 (Canadian Press).—Humphrey Cooper, Calgary mountain climber, was rescued today from a narrow ledge on End Mountain, where he had been trapped for more than 40 hours.

Victor Kutschera, guide, made a difficult descent to the ledge, fastened a rope sling about the climber and brought him to the mountain top. Cooper fell 700 feet to the ledge Tuesday night and was believed to have suffered a concussion and rib fractures. The injured climber was taken over a rough trail to the base camp, 15 miles west of here, on a stretcher.

British Raise Rail Rate.

London, Aug. 5 (AP).—The railway rates tribunal today granted the request of Great Britain's four major railways for a 5 per cent increase in fares and freight charges. The increase will be effective October 1.

Last Hope Abandoned For 14 in Air Disaster

Cristobal, Canal Zone, Aug. 5 (AP). Hope was abandoned today of finding alive any of the 14 persons aboard a Pan American-Grace airliner, which plunged Monday into the sea off Panama.

H. R. Harris, vice president of the airline, attributed the accident to an "act of God" and expressed belief all the crew and passengers were dead.

One Killed, 20 Injured In Brake-Lining Blast

Zionists Vote Secret Debate On Palestine

Zurich Congress Overrules Opposition of Most U. S. Delegates.

By the Associated Press.

Zurich, Switzerland, Aug. 5.—The Zionist World Congress, over the opposition of most United States delegates, voted today to debate behind closed doors the British plan to partition Palestine.

Delegates were almost equally divided over another motion, drafted by President Chaim Weizmann, to authorize new Zionist executives to negotiate with the British government on the proposed division of the Holy Land into Jewish and Arab states and a British mandated territory.

Another resolution was offered empowering the congress executive committee to "conduct negotiations for the purpose of ascertaining precisely the scope of the British government's proposal to establish a Jewish state in Palestine."

The motion, which was believed likely to be adopted, would instruct the committee to reporte to another specially elected Zionist Congress, but would prohibit it from making any commitments.

It was presented by the Zionist labor bloc, which controls 45 per cent of the voting strength in the congress. It already has the support of 220 members, including many opponents of the partition plan.

In Geneva, British Colonial Secretary William G. A. Ormsby-Gore ended a five and a half day cross-examination by the League of Nations mandates commission on the plan. The commission, evidently, was not convinced of the necessity of splitting Palestine.

Weizmann urged that the British royal commission's plan not be rejected flatly, even though "the proposal as it now stands is not acceptable." He contended that it left open a way to make Palestine a national Jewish home.

D.C. Patients Will Be Moved To Glenn Dale

220 Tuberculosis Patients to Be Transferred to New Hospital.

Approximately 220 patients at the Tuberculosis Hospital at Fourteenth and Upshur streets northwest will be removed to the new Adult Sanatorium at Glenn Dale, Md., in the near future, it was learned yesterday.

Those who will make the more than 15-mile journey into nearby Maryland will include all patients of the District at the hospital here except a very few who will be sent to Gallinger.

Exact date of the transfer depends upon how soon the finishing touches are put on the Glenn Dale Institution, perhaps the most complete of its kind in the country.

It is only a question of a month or so, officials asserted, until the sanatorium will be ready and fully equipped to assume its gigantic task.

Ambulances Needed.

To do this it will be necessary to have ambulances for the 80 patients who are in critical condition. Authorities hope to obtain these ambulances from the Army, the Navy and the Marine Corps.

Certain portions of the road to Glenn Dale are rough, unpaved and dusty. Staff physicians at the Tuberculosis Hospital here yesterday said with good luck and the best facilities, serious consequences will be avoided.

"Walking cases" will be transferred in huge buses. The hospital hopes to get these from the Capital Transit Co.

Only inmates of the hospital who will not go to the great new institution at Glenn Dale are those too ill to stand the trip. These will be transferred to Gallinger, so they can be near their families.

"The new sanatorium is an establishment where stubborn cases can be cured, and where, in years to come, thousands of victims may find health," stated an official at the hospital yesterday.

Has 396 Beds.

Officials yesterday emphasized that they would not move their charges to the new sanatorium until everything was in complete readiness, thus avoiding a repetition of the experiences at the Children's Sanatorium two years ago, where only a portion could be opened because of a lack of equipment, personnel and supplies.

There are 396 beds in the sanatorium, and the capacity can be slightly greater, while the District Hospital at Fourteenth and Upshur streets has long been overcrowded—its original capacity being no more than 100 patients.

Unions May Halt Coulee Dam Work

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

A jurisdictional dispute between the Committee for Industrial Organization and the American Federation of Labor, is threatening to hamper work on the Government's $64,000,000 Grand Coulee Dam, keystone of the New Deal's Northwest power program, it was learned last night.

The dispute hinges on C. I. O. charges that on July 29 the Mason-Walsh-Atkinson-Kier Co., building the dam, signed a contract at Mason City, Wash., with the federation's building and construction departments, granting exclusive recognition of the A. F. of L. unions, and invoking the closed shop against the C. I. O.

District Will Test Wells and Springs

An inspection of District wells and springs was ordered yesterday by the Health Department as a precaution gainst contamination.

Dr. John E. Goble, director of the Bureau of Laboratories, will conduct the survey. He will begin his survey with a study of old construction records.

Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, said a tabulation of wells and springs would be of great value. He estimated there were hundreds in use here.

Woman Leaves $1,000 Fund To Care for Her Pet Canaries

Bulk of Mrs. Eleanor E. Witherspoon's $250,000 Estate Will Go to Smithsonian; Relatives, Friends Also Remembered.

Leaving a will in which she disposed of more than $250,000, Mrs. Eleanor E. Witherspoon, widow of Thomas A. Witherspoon, well known patent attorney, yesterday directed that $1,000 of the estate be held in trust to care for pet canaries.

The will directed that the Smithsonian Institution be given all that was left from the estate when all bequests were paid. It is expected that the institution wil receive in the neighborhood of $200,000.

The will directed that a trust fund of $30,000 be established for the benefit of Anna Francis Poole Bush, a cousin, with the additional direction that after her death the fund was to go to the Red Cross and the Salvation Army.

Another trust of $15,000 is made for the benefit of her sisters-in-law, Martha Hatch Witherspoon and Fanny Wemyss Witherspoon during their lifetime. Thereafter it will continue for the Thomas A. Witherspoon Educational Memorial in the town of Gallatin, Tenn., to assist poor boys and girls to obtain an education. A bequest of $500 also is made to Fulton High School, of Fulton, N. Y., for prizes to be awarded to poor boys and girls selected by the faculty. A number of other relatives and friends are remembered by gifts or annuities ranging from $3,000 to $250. The Florence Crittenton Home is bequeathed $5,000 as a memorial to her husband. A feature of the will is the bequest of $500 to every servant, companion, relative or friend who had been a member of her household during the last year of her life.

Prices Boosted On All General Motors' Autos

Olds Up $45, Cadillac $100, La Salle, $60 and Buick, $30 to $60.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Aug. 5 (AP).—Plans for stepping up the retail prices of all General Motors automobiles were announced today. Following closely upon the price increase announced by the Ford Motor Co. and the statement of General Motors' chairman, Alfred P. Sloan, jr., that price boosts were inevitable, Cadillac, La Salle, Oldsmobile, Pontiac, Chevrolet and Buick divisions of the corporation disclosed the retail listings are to be increased.

Effective August 9, Oldsmobile prices are to be increased $45. After August 14, Cadillac units will be raised $100 and La Salle $60. Buick will raise retail prices about 3 or 4 per cent (from $30 to approximately $60) on August 9. Pontiac and Chevrolet have not yet determined the dates for their advances.

Authoritative sources indicated today all other producers will follow the same course. All have been affected by the increased cost of materials and higher wage scales.

Sloan in his statement blamed labor difficulties for a sharp drop in General Motors gross earnings during the first half of 1937 and said a "substantial increase in selling prices" must be expected to result from the trend toward higher wages and other production costs along with a "certain decrease in labor efficiency."

Increases announced today were considerably lower than most trade observers had expected to follow Sloan's announcement and led to speculation in distribution quarters as to wnether further advances may be expected with the introduction of new models in the fall.

Tom Mooney Passes Crisis in His Illness

San Francisco, Aug. 5 (AP).—Tom Mooney apparently passed the crisis today in the illness which sent him to San Quentin Prison Hospital, but his attorney prepared to seek a court order transferring him to a San Francisco institution in the event of a relapse.

10 Convicts, Boy Flee Three Georgia Prisons

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 5 (U.P.).—Escapes from Georgia chain gangs continued today as 11 new fugitives fled from three prisons. Seven colored convicts hacked their way out of the Bibb County stockade early today. Three others slipped way from a road gang unnoticed in Glynn County. An 11-year-old boy was reported to have wriggled through a hole in the wall of the Brunswick municipal jail.

Companions Save Youth in Potomac

Jack Duncan, 13-year-old son of John Duncan, guad at the Lorton Reformatory, was saved from drowning in the Potomac River near Alexandria yesterday by two of his companions.

Duncan stepped into deep water while wading. Thomas Campbell, 11, son of Police Capt. W. W. Campbell, and Stephen Davis, jr., son of Capt. Stephen Davis, swam to his rescue.

They grabbed him twice, but lost their grip. The third time they held on and dragged the boy to shore.

ADA Facing Loss of All Federal Aid

Move to Amend Plan to Safeguard D. C. Expected.

Notwithstanding assurances given by Senator Robert Wagner (Democrat), of New York, the author, there is a distinct danger that the Alley Dwelling Authority of the District will get none of the $726,000,000 in loans, grants, and contributions provided by the national housing bill.

John Ihler, executive officer of the Alley Dwelling Authority, was so advised yesterday by Maurice V. Brooks, attorney for the ADA.

Operating with a Federal fund of $860,000, the Alley Dwelling Authority has reclaimed 15 alley slums here. Virtually as much money has been earned as has been spent. The model houses it has erected for erstwhile slum dwellers have won Nation-wide praise. However, there remain 185 alleys to be dealt with, and Ihlder would like to have a revolving fund of $3,000,000 or $4,000,000 to accelerate the program.

Offers Amendment.

To remove any doubt as to Alley Dwelling Authority sharing in the benefits of the Wagner housing bill, Chairman King of the Senate District Committee arose in the Senate Wednesday and offered an amendment to the bill. Thereupon, Senator Wagner interrupted to say:

"My colleague was concerned as to whether the District of Columbia is included in the bill so as to secure the benefits of it. I invite his attention to page 36, line 23."

The provision to which Wagner called attention says:

"The term 'public housing agency' means any State, county, municipality, or other governmental entity or public body."

Wagner then called attention to a provison on page 38, which reads as follows:

"The term 'State' includes the States of the United States, the District of Columbia, and the Territories, dependencies and possessions of the United States."

Sentor Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, told Wagner that the attorney for the Alley Dwelling Authority had held this language, though seemingly specific, was not enough to assure the ADA of benefits. Senator Copeland (Democrat), of New York, joined in asking that this city's interests be protected.

"I assure the Senator," said Wagner, "there can be no doubt about it, because we include those who are to be benefited, among others the States of the United States, and then on page 38 we say that 'The term "State" includes the District of Columbia.' I am sure that is as clear as can be made."

Might Lose in Court.

Despite Wagner's assurances, however, Attorney Brooks, of the ADA, fears that the District of Columbia might be ruled out by a court or by the General Accounting Office. His opinion runs something like this:

The language of the law contemplates that the public housing agencies will be creatures of the State. The bill says that the term State includes the District of Columbia, but this is beside the point because the District of Columbia is merely an administrative agency of Congress.

A State is sovereign, but the voteless District of Columbia is not. Consequently the inclusion of its name among the States in a bill does not give it powers denied it by the Constitution.

The Alley Dwelling Authority is not a creature of the District government, but of Congress. Congress is the source of power both for it and the local government.

If this is so, a court or the General Accounting Office might not be satisfied with Senator Wagner's assurances that the District is meant to be included in the benefits. The prospect is that another attempt will be made by friends of the District to amend the bill in the Senate, or, failing that, to amend it when it reaches the House.

Taxi Men Form Protest Group

More than 100 taxi drivers last night volunteered to carry the protest of the Industrial Brotherhood of Taxi Drivers before the Senate District Committee hearing on the compulsory liability insurance bill Monday.

The protest group was organized after a meeting of the brotherhood at 423 G street northwest embodied in a resolution the organization's objections to the bill, already passed by the House.

Members of the brotherhood will be unable to pay for the insurance, the resolution declared, unless legislation is adopted limiting the number of cabs on Washington streets.

E. Erwin Dollar, president of the brotherhood, announced the organization's membership now totals 1,100.

Here's Cheer for D. C. Motorists; Tug That Delays 3,500 Cars Daily Will Remain But Three More Weeks

Norfolk Craft Now Makes 18 Trips Every 24 Hours.

A saucy, salty old lady of the sea, the tugboat Albemarle, out of Norfolk and in Washington on an extended business trip, has proved the latest snarl to traffic between the District and Virginia.

Because her light mast has a few extra feet of height and her smokestack is taller than that of most inland tugs, more than 3,500 motorists are held up daily at the Memorial bridge and highway bridge while drawbridges rise and swing for the Albemarle's passing.

Working day and night between Georgetown channel, above Memorial bridge, and Gravelly Point, she makes 18 trips every 24 hours. So the figure of drivers detained for the minutes she slides beneath the spans is collective for each day.

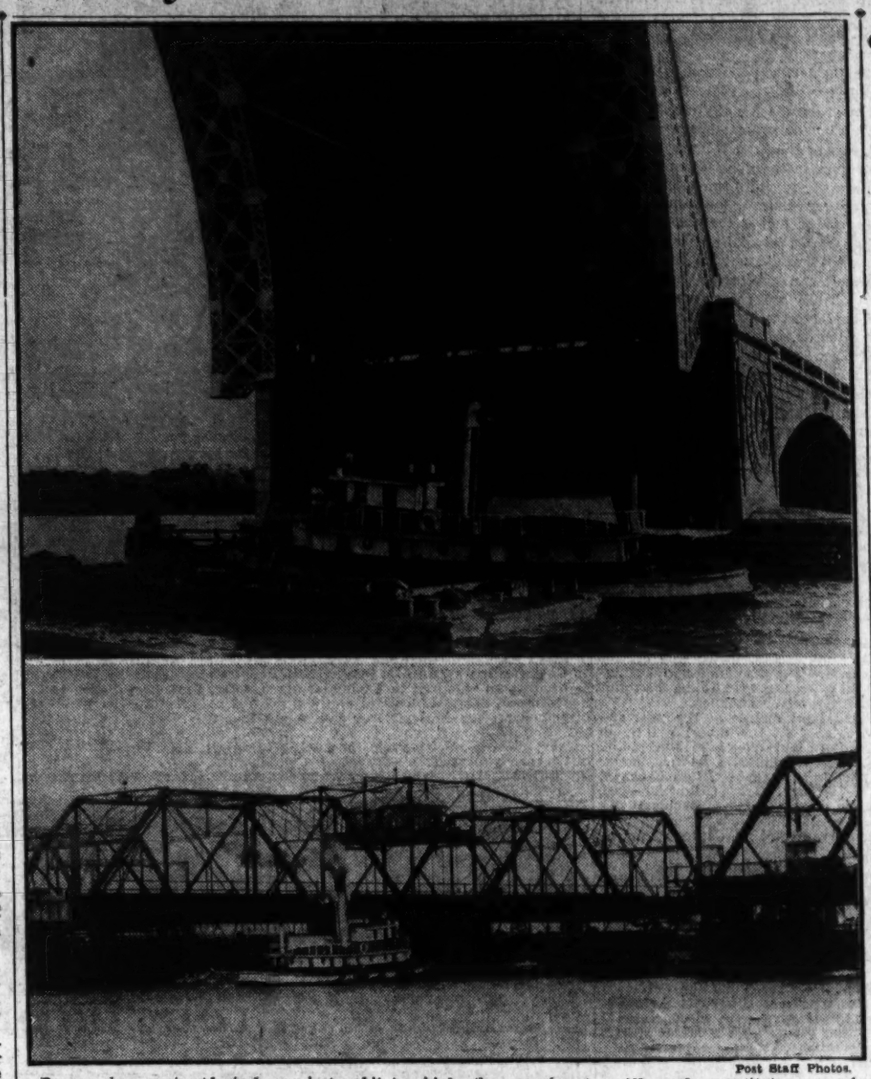
Able to stand the buffeting of the ocean, the Albemarle's offense here is not her fault. She could pass under Memorial bridge but for the few feet of mast. But even her chimney will not let her snort under Highway bridge until the draw swings while traffic waits.

The Albemarle, because she is a transient and a visitor in these waters, escapes the act of Congress, signed March 4, 1909, which requires tugboats operating habitually in these waters to have hinged stacks and masts if they cannot otherwise go beneath the bridges.

Hinging of the mast and smokestack of the Albemarle is impractical just now, her captain, George Daniels, a sunbronzed seafaring man said last night.

"We'll only be here about another three weeks, and then our work will be done, and we'll be going back to Norfolk," he said.

At that, the Albemarle could pass Memorial Bridge even at high tide if the mast were hinged, for the span is 32 feet above mean low water, and 29 feet is the high water allowance.



Post Staff Photos.

Because her mast and stack are just a bit too high, the seagoing tug Albemarle constitutes one of Washington's most pressing traffic problems for the time being. For the mast and the stack, the Memorial Bridge draw must be lifted (upper), and the Highway Bridge swung (lower), 18 times in every 24 hours. That holds up 3,500 motorists and irks them no end.

But Highway Bridge is lower. It is only 21.2 feet above mean low water, and the stack and pilot house of the Albemarle are too lofty for passage.

The Albemarle, which rests neither day nor night, works for the Bishop Dredging Co., of Norfolk, which has a $154,432 contract for dredging the channel, and depositing the sand and gravel at Gravelly Point, below the Railroad Bridge.

Despite the fact some Virginians, delayed more than once on their way home, or on their way to work, have complained to the War Department, there is no law which can affect the Albemarle.

"We're here to let all craft pass, except at 8:20 to 9 a. m. and 4:20 to 5:15 p. m., the restricted hours," observed Night Overseer of Memorial Bridge, J. F. Williams, as automobiles waited and the bridge rose as the Albemarle chugged through.

"She's a stranger in our waters—a busy stranger, too. A nice looking boat. All boats get right of way beneath the bridge, you know, and she gets the same courtesy and consideration other ships get."

As the tug slid down the river toward her destination, the great draw closed, and hundreds of waiting cars speeded across it. Then the Albemarle whistled gaily, went beneath Highway Bridge, and the draw swung open, like a mechanical man turning on his heel.

The same thing happened at Railroad Bridge.

The Albemarle puffed downstream into the dusk. She can do about 10 knots and has a crew of the captain, six men and a cook. A barge is strapped to her side, and from the air she looks like a comfortable white cabin with a green lawn attached, floating in a flood.

"We're mighty sorry folks are put out," remarked the skipper last night, as he leaned from her rail.

"Business is business, though. But we wouldn't intentionally cause anybody any trouble in the world.

"Guess we're just used to our own waters and built that way. We've got lots of motorists at home—but boats don't bother them any.

"Those drawbridges are dandies, though!"

School Board Asks 50 Pct. Budget Raise

Donovan 'Astounded' When $18,800,000 Total Is Sought.

$6,259,000 Requested for New Grounds and Buildings.

The school board yesterday asked for a record-breaking 50 per cent increase in its budget, which presaged a general elevation of District departmental requests.

All departments are expected to file their requirements for 1939 by August 10, with the welfare division scheduled to hand in its demands next. It is expected to ask for more money from a municipality already weighted down with $7,500,000 new taxes.

Auditor Donovan was astounded at the school board's request for $6,000,000 beyond its last year needs of $12,800,000.

After remarking that he was having his hands full staving off bankruptcy here, he said:

"If everybody comes in with demands like this, I don't know what we will do. We're having our troubles meeting expenses even with the increased tax revenues."

If other departments follow the school board's example, vastly increased taxes will have to be voted to pay the bills. In all likelihood, however, the requests will undergo a servere trimming before they reach Congress, which also will wield the pruning knife, if it follows its usual custom.

Principal item in the huge school increase was for buildings and grounds. These total $6,259,000, or $4,500,000 more than this year. The board pointed out that if the buildings are not scheduled for 1939 they will still have to be considered in 1940.

Half a million dollars more than last year was asked for teachers, raising this amount to $7,596,000. Most of the other items run close to those of last year, with the exception of administration personnel ($50,000 more), clerical personnel $118,000 more), community centers ($50,000 more), textbooks ($45,000 more), repairs ($385,000 more) and furniture ($30,000 more).

The clerical help item was explained by the board as being requested in order to release 21 teachers now engaged in clerical work for classroom instruction The board asks 241 new teachers. Last year's request for 233 was slashed by Congress to 54.

New schools suggested and their sites are:

Elementary school at Eleventh and G streets northwest, $200,000; elementary school at Washington Circle, $240,000; school for physically handicapped, $105,000; senior high school on Rhode Island avenue northeast. $45,000; junior high school at Kansas avenue and Gallatin street northwest. $200,000, and a junior high school near Massachusetts avenue and Macomb street northwest, $75,000.

Broken Coupling Delays 2 Trains For Nearly Hour

Two south-bound Chesapeake & Ohio passenger trains were delayed nearly an hour last night at the railroad bridge when a coupling on the leading train broke, releasing three rear cars.

The train had halted while the drawbridge was opened to permit passage of a tugboat and six barges. The break occurred as the train started on the signal that the bridge had been closed.

Inquest to Fix Elevator Death Responsibility

Coroner Plans Inquiry Into How Youth Was Caught in Shaft.

Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, the District coroner, last night said he would order an inquest into the elevator death of James Steadman, 21, colored, 449 H street northwest, because "I feel there are certain facts in connection with the operation of this elevator that I think a coroner's jury should know."

Dr. MacDonald said he did not care to discuss the facts or to comment on operation of the elevator until the case has been presented to the jury at the inquest sometime next week.

Steadman was slowly crushed to death in the Palace Laundry Co. plant at Ninth and H streets northwest Tuesday.

Meanwhile, Harry S. Wender, counsel for the International Union of Elevator Constructors, Local No. 10, made public a letter to Dr. MacDonald, calling attention to the removal of a collapsible gate to the elevator car.

The gate, Wender said, was found "standing in the corner of the second floor next to the elevator shaft."

"This gate had been installed," Wender's letter said, "as part of the original equipment . . . although it is conceded that present regulations do not require more than one collapsible car gate where the car is open on two sides, as was true in this case."

Wender's letter also called attention to provisions for "removal, replacement and use of safeguards" in the District elevator regulations prohibiting the removal of "any safeguard, safety appliance, or device attached to the hoisting mechanism of any elevator, escalator or dumb waiter, or that may be attached to or located in the car or in the hoistways of such installations."

"It is our sincere hope," Wender said, "that you will make such recommendations to the District Commissioners as you may deem necessary with respect to additional elevator regulation safeguards. . . ."

Justice Van Orsdell Still Is Gravely Ill

Great Barrington, Mass., Aug. 5 (AP).—The condition of Justice J. A. Van Orsdell, 77, of the United States Court of Appeals, District of Columbia, was "possibly slightly improved, but not materially changed," Dr. John B. Beebe reported tonight.

Dr. Beebe, who said he considered the justice gravely ill, would not disclose the nature of the illness which has kept Justice Van Orsdell confined for three weeks.

District Tax Bill to Provide For 42 Permanent Employes

Measure, Now Awaiting President's Signature, Will, as a Law, Require Unestimated Number of Temporary Workers.

Forty-two permanent employes and an unestimated number of temporary employes will be hired by the District to put the new tax law in working order, according to a plan forwarded to the Bureau of the Budget yesterday by District Auditor Donovan. All will be recruited from civil service lists, with the exception of one corporation counsel.

The bill last night was at the White House awaiting the President's signature. It may encounter some delay, as the President's attitude toward the Tydings-Miller "rider" is unknown. This amendment is designed to halt the practice of some chain stores of selling retail goods at a loss as an inducement to get customers into their stores. Making such price-pegging legal may be in contravention to the Sherman antitrust law. In the event the "rider" is disapproved by the White House. District officials said they were sure the tax bill would be passed by Congress without the rider.

Money to pay them may be withdrawn from other funds. It is hoped the Bureau of the Budget will approve the plan and that Congress in January will sign a deficiency check to repay these funds.

Donovan figured the cost at $92,180. Most of this will be used to pay salaries for 37 new clerks in the Tax Assessor's office. Five clerks will be needed in the Tax Collector's office.

Charles H. Gray, assistant corporation counsel, is in line for general legal supervisor and adviser of the tax departments, according to Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal. His salary will be $4,600 a year, it was believed. A new attorney will be appointed to fill Gray's present place.

Most of the temporary employes will be needed to compute the new automobile weight tax. This tax levies upon automobiles under a new scheme. Taxes per car will run between $5 and $12, according to weight, with some commercial vehicles' tax running as high as $150.

Diary of Officer Describes Custer Massacre by Indians

From the yellowed pages of an old diary, dipping back more than half a century, yesterday came new light on the Battle of Little Big Horn, when Gen. George A Custer and his command were wiped out by Indians in what was one of the most historic battles of the American frontier.

The document which yesterday furnished the word picture was the diary of Capt. John Gibbon, an officer in the relief force, which arrived at the scene of the Battle of the Little Big Horn two days after the slaughter. The men in blue got there in time to bury the dead and rescue the scattered wounded of the command of Maj. Reno.

Walter Clifford, of Washington, a son of Capt. Clifford, member of Capt. Gibbon's staff, made the data available to the Smithsonian.

Discovery of a Cavalry horse, shot through the eyes, and dead, led to the finding of the dead and wounded of the battle.

"All the dead are more or less mutilated." Capt. Clifford wrote. "Those of Custer and Keogh were not. The squaws finished the wounded by knocking them off by axes."

"All the bodies, except that of Custer, were stripped."

Removal of the command of Maj. Reno, who found safety from the Sioux by taking refuge in the hills, was described by Capt. Clifford.

"Eight men were detailed to each litter," he wrote.

"As darkness came, the cries of pain from the wounded as one of the stretcher bearers would stumble were frequent.

"Later strong litters were made, with blankets.

"Among the wounded was an Indian. His friends, the Crows, took care of him. Their style of litter was a number of springy lodge poles, lashed to the side of a pony, and trailed along the ground."

Thus, out of the musty volumes of the past, yesterday the Smithsonian found a first-hand story of the aftermath of one of the most legendary battles in American history.

30 Burglaries In 10 Hours Net Thieves $3,000

$1,500 in Dresses Stolen From Shop; Yeggs Fail in Safe Job.

Crime figures continued to mount yesterday despite several arrests.

In a ten-hour period ending at 7 p. m. last night nearly $3,000 worth of loot had been taken by burglars in 30 homes and stores.

Largest of the thefts was made in a dress shop in the 1600 block Connecticut avenue northwest, when $1,500 worth of dresses and other women's wearing apparel was stolen. Miss Edna Wadnick, 3000 Connecticut avenue northwest, who reported the theft, said the shop was entered through a rear window.

Jewelry valued at $800 was stolen from his apartment at 1601 Argonne place northwest, Abert Dunlap said.

Police believed the capture of three colored boys last night would solve a score of purse thefts. The crimes, all laid to the trio, were alike in that the youths would snatch a handbag and then knock the victim to the ground to hinder pursuit. Riding in a car, also believed stolen, they were arrested by Precinct Detective Robert V. Murray.

Meanwhile, police continued to hold a middle-aged man for investigation. He was arrested by Detective Sergt. Eugene Lambert and Detective Richard Felber, after he was seen leaving a Chevy Chase home.

Police were holding a 15-year-old youth who is suspected of several thefts in the southwest section. He admits ransacking two homes and business places. The loot was recovered.

An attempt was made to crack a safe in the Phelps & Roberts Automobile Parts Co., 1800 block Fourteenth street northwest, but the yeggmen were unsuccessful.

Plumber, 18, Killed By Electric Shock

Milton Pearson, jr., 18, son of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Pearson, of 237 Eleventh street southeast, was accidentally electrocuted yesterday while at work with a plumber in the cellar of a house at 220 West Howell avenue, Alexandria.

The police report said young Pearson was lying on his back on the dirt floor of the half cellar, holding an electric extension wire when he suffered a shock which caused his death. The rescue squad of the Alexandria Fire Department worked over Pearson for more than an hour. The wire which had been pulled from the socket was in Pearson's hand when he was found.

Eddie Melton, of 616 Mount Vernon avenue, Alexandria, was working nearby when the accident occurred. Both he and Pearson are employed by R. J. Dwyer, installing plumbing fixtures.

Dr. Llewellyn Powell, Alexandria coroner, stated he would hold an inquest at noon today if necessary.

Film Miracles Still Surprise Veteran Actor

Studios and Lots Reveal New Wonders Each Day Even to Oldtimer.

By Ralph Bellamy.
By the United Press.

Hollywood, Aug. 5.—If the ninth wonder of the world isn't Hollywood, it should be. This community, and the industry that centers here, is probably the most amazing on earth. It never fails to fascinate and astonish and one can live and work here six years like myself, yet run into a fresh surprise every day. Consider only the past few days and the things I stumbled upon quite by accident. I was quite astounded to learn—

That "slow motion" machine gun bullets are frequently used in films. They are fired by compressed air, which shoots them exactly where wanted and sometimes with only enough force to tear paper.

That an established star like Jean Parker studies harder than many beginners. While working in "Life Begins With Love." She took singing, dancing, dramatics, painting and costume-design lessons every day.

That movie fog can be perfumed. Usually, fog is made by burning charcoal, but, when John Brahamthe director, found out that both Otto Kruger and Jacqueline Wells were overly sensitive to that, he substituted fresh pine wood and incense—which created a fog good enough to eat!

Dogs Remember Retakes.

That some canine actors are better than humans. Asta, the little wire-hair who plays with Irene Dunne, Cary Grant and myself in "The Awful Truth" at Columbia, remembers cues, repeats "Business" and otherwise does a scene over and over the same as before.

That sponge-rubber gravel is used in outdoor settings, so no crunching sound will interfere with the scene's dialogue.

That the easier a song is, the harder it is to sing—for some voices. Grace Moore can execute the most difficut operatic arias. But, when it comes to St. Louis Blues, which has been mentioned as a song possibility for her in "I'll Take Romance," she demurs. Miss Moore says a single torch ballad put her trained vocal chords on edge for several days afterward.

That a complete opera house, the Metropolitan, can be constructed overnight, as Columbia did for this same picture.

That every star has "mental hazards," and when one pops up in his script he simply cannot surmount it. Richard Dix can't put his hat on a bed, Patricia Farr can't talk when her hair is in curlers, Fay Wray can't whistle, Scott Colton can't wear boots and Ralph Bellamy can't work opposite an actor wearing a toupee—his eyes keep wavering up to the false topping.

That the Cinderella story is retold every day, as when young Wyn Cahoon was just recently snatched out of the cast of a Broadway show and hustled to Hollywood.

Buck Gets Thrills.

That Frank Buck, while making his serial, "Jungle Menace," in the safety of a studio, got more wild-animal thrills than he ever encountered in Africa.

That real diamonds photograph so much brighter than paste gems that they have to be sprayed with lacquer. Madeleine Carrol wore $150,000 worth of stones in her scenes with Francis Lederer in "It's All Yours," and was never allowed to escape the watchful eye of a private detective.

That a feminine star's hat, for a single scene, can cost $425. Robert Kalloch, Columbia stylist, designed one such chapeau for Irene Dunne.

That a few years ago, 16 "frames" of film passed a camera's lens every second, but now it is speeded up to 24. Sound required it.

That—but, why continue to parade one's ignorance? New insights like these are an everyday experience in Hollywood. Still, some say pictures are still in their infancy! If that is so, let's hope that they never grow up. No maturity could surpass their present juvenile vitality.

Will Paper Room With 1,000 Pictures

Victor Moore will paper the playroom walls of his new home with more than 1,000 pictures from the various shows in which he has appeared in the past 40 years.

Beginning with pictures of his first vaudeville act, "Change Your Act or Back to the Woods," and including stills from his current film, "The Life of the Party," the room will be covered with photographs from the ceiling to the tops of the built-in seats. The pictures will run in groups, each group telling the story of a play.

Ruby Keeler With RKO-R Exclusively

Ruby Keeler, famous dancing star of the stage and screen, has been signed to a long-term contract giving her services exclusively to RKO-Radio on a basis of two pictures per year. Her first picture will be "Love Below Freezing," in which she will star with Mitzi Green, 17-year-old Broadway favorite also signed by RKO recently.

Barrymore Signs For Dunne Film

John Barrymore, one of the greatest actors the American stage has ever contributed to the screen, has been signed for one of the chief roles in "The Joy of Loving," Irene Dunne's next starring vehicle.

Barrymore will play the part of a stage producer in the forth coming fall feature.

The musical score, lyrics and story will be by Jerome Kern, Dorothy Fields and Herbert Fields.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

'Way Back in 1907, B. C. (Before Cooling) Theaters Played to Capacity in Devastating Temperatures

The National and Columbia Did Landoffice Business Throughout Summer Months in the Old Days; A "Big" Picture was 90 Feet Long; Mr. Selznick Overlooks a Bet; Foster for Detective Crane; "Old Mizzoura" Clicks; Notes of the Theater.

THIS must be the sissy age in the theater.

What with the latest improved refrigeration systems and all of the other modern provisions that are made for the creature comfort of theater patrons, attending the play or picture house nowadays is nothing more heroic than following the line of least resistance in the quest of coolness.

BELL.

In these days of scorching sun and blistering pavements, it never occurs to the casual theatergoer that his precursor of three decades ago in the Capital was as faithful as he in the face of conditions that would not be tolerated by the new crop of cash customers inured to all of the aids to bodily welfare science has been able to devise. Nevertheless, it was just at this time of the summer, some 30 years ago, that the National Theater, with its annual summer engagement of the Aborn Light Opera Company, and the Columbia Theater, with its unfailing summer season of the Columbia Players, were literally "packing 'em in."

Regardless of any inimical psychological effect it might have been expected to have on the lay mind by suggesting a hot auditorium, it was the custom in those remote days to pass out cardboard fans at the door in order that the patron might exercise himself into greater heat and perspiration in the belief that he was cooling off!

What you don't know won't hurt you. Nobody knew about cooling systems back in 1907.

The bills that were presented by the Aborns, on the one hand, and the Metzerotts, on the other, justified the packed houses to which they played—just as the current summer productions in the Municipal Theater, in St. Louis, and at Jones Beach, Long Island, justify the crowds of thousands that turn out to enjoy them. The National and Columbia entertainments from week to week were the best to be had this side of New York during the heated months of the summer.

The Aborns put on all of the standard light operas of the past and the then-present in such admirable fashion that there was a time in the National's history when its doors were not closed to the public for an unbroken period of five years. The Columbia, I believe, never quite made that record, but with such players as the late Wilton Lackaye, Guy Standing, Hilda Spong, Charlotte Walker, George Barbier—yes, the same who is now in pictures—Carrie Thatcher (Mrs. Barbier) and the long line of able principals who came after, it used to "hang them from the chandeliers," even with the temperature at 110 degrees Fahrenheit.

Those days seem definitely to have passed in the living theater, save in rare and isolated instances, and with the present era's keen competition it is doubtful if they ever will come back.

It would be pleasant, even so, to hear Forrest Huff singing "Brown October Ale" again from the National stage, or A. H. Van Buren, doing a Dustin Farnum in "The Virginian," at the Columbia.

Yes, even without the cooling plants.

* * * *

As for the cinema in those old days of the Aborns and the Columbians, a feature-film was about 90 feet long and a palatial picture theater was an abandoned store room, equipped with circus seats without backs. The suggestion of motion pictures on F street then would have been looked upon as a sacrilege. That gentleman on the screen is right: "Time marches on!"

Sixty-two sets, ranging in size from a sentry box no larger than a telephone booth to a huge cathedral and two castles, were constructed for the David O. Selznik picturization of Anthony Hope's novel of "The Prisoner of Zenda," with Ronald Colman, Madeleine Carroll and Douglas Fairbanks, jr., in the pivtotal roles.

According to those who should know, the 41,900 man-hours of labor involved would be sufficient for the erection of 40 five-room dwellings.

The smallest set, the sentry box, standing on the border of the mythical monarchy over which Colman rules as King Rudolf V, was approximately three feet square and six feet high. The largest set, the grand ballroom of Strelsau Castle, with a staircase with 36 risers and a dance floor of 10,000 square feet of white enameled plywood, was 80 feet wide and 230 feet long.

Other impressive sets included the Zenda royal hunting lodge, the cathedral, the great Stone Hall of Zenda Castle, the dungeons and tunnels of Zenda Castle and the drawbridge, portcullis and moat.

It seems too bad that Mr. Selznick should have gone to all of this trouble and expense. I feel sure that if proper representations had been made, he could have secured the Roadside Theater Company's complete production of "Zenda" for a fraction of the cost!

Well, at last, that Detective Crane business is settled to the satisfaction—I hope—of all concerned. A letter from R. H. Cochrane, president of Universal Pictures, Inc., dated New York, August 4, says the last word in the matter, as follows:

"Dear Mr. Bell: Since you were kind enough to interest yourself in the selection of the ideal actor to play Detective Crane, I feel sure you will be equally interested to know who was chosen. The choice fell upon Preston Foster and I, personally, feel that it was a very good choice indeed. I hope that you will like it, too

"At the same time we have decided to call the first picture 'The Westland Case.' It has been adapted from 'Headed for a Hearse.' I am also able to tell you the names of some of the cast—Carol Hughes, Barbara Pepper, Astrid Allwyn, George Meeker, Frank Jenks, Theodore von Eltz, Clarence Wilson, Russell Hicks, Rollo Lloyd, Selmer Jackson and Thomas Jackson. Christy Cabanne will direct. We hope to have this first Crime Club production ready for release early in October. Sincerely, (Signed) R. H. COCHRANE."

Not yet having read the books involving Detective Crane, I still am a little vague as to precisely what he ought to be like. If he ought to be good-looking, with the physique of a heavyweight champ, Preston Foster is the lad.

* * * *

It is interesting to note that while its earlier records have been made with plays of a little less rationalized character, the Roadside Theater, this summer, is doing its largest gross business with the current attraction, Augustus Thomas' genre drama "Old Mizzoura."

It will be further interesting to observe whether the pendulum takes an additional upward tilt next week, and week after, when the bill will be "The Haunted Mill," another of those antiquated melodramas in which the Roadsiders more or less specialize.

Comes another book—this time from Little Brown & Co., with the compliments of Samuel Goldwyn. It is a copy of "The Hurricane," by Charles Nordhoff and James Norman Hall, authors of "Mutiny on the Bounty." In the expectation that "The Hurricane" would make as fascinating and as exciting a picture as "Mutiny," Mr. Goldwyn has seen to its filming with Jon Hall and Dorothy Lamour heading an able cast that includes Mary Astor, C. Aubrey Smith and Raymond Massey. This is one I think I'll read before the picture gets here—the first page or two sound that way.

House Leaders Plan to Delay Wages Bill Until Late Next Week, Consider Housing.

SPEAKER BANKHEAD said yesterday House consideration of the wages-hours bill will be delayed until late next week.

Bankhead said House leaders have revised their program somewhat and now hope to bring the Wagner-Steagal housing bill to the floor ahead of the wages-hours bill.

He said the new plan calls for consideration of wages and hours beginning Thursday. He explained that the House Rules Committee will not meet until Wednesday to give a rule to permit it to be brought to the floor. Bankhead said the House might act in Saturday session next week if the wages-hours bill is unfinished at that time.

FORTY STATES will share in the nearly $50,000,000 of rivers and harbors work voted by the Senate yesterday. The House already has acted on the bill. Acceptance or rejection of numerous projects added by the Senate will complete Congressional action.

Senator Copeland, of New York, said the net cost of the projects in the bill would be $48,715,000. The bill merely carries authorizations and no appropriations will be sought this year.

Senator Thomas, of Oklahoma, said he might call on members of an economists' "lobby" to tell his Senate agriculture sub-committee about alleged expenditures to defeat liberal banking and currency legislation.

He made his statement after Louis B. Ward, Detroit business counsel, testified that the economists national committee on monetary affairs, with headquarters in New York, had disclosed the expenditure of $45,000 last year to influence money measures in Congress.

AN INTERNATIONAL AGREEMENT for the regulation of whaling, signed June 8 at London, was ratified by hte Senate.

Senator White (Republican), Maine, told the Senate the agreement "modernizes" another reached in 1931. Twenty-six nations signed the latter pact, designed to prevent wasteful destruction of whales.

The new pact prohibits the killing of certain species, limits killing of others to certain seasons, and provides for the fullest utilization of the carcass.

THE RULES COMMITTEE paved the way for House consideration, probably next week, of the Chandler bill to permit wage earners to adjust their debts without resort to bankruptcy.

The bill, which would create a debtors' court for the wage earners, was given a privileged status by the committee.

Other provisions of the measure would give the Securities Commission authority to intervene in corporate reorganization proceedings in the interest of individual investors.

REPRESENTATIVE CANNON, of Missouri, acting chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, said the third deficiency appropriation bill—forerunner of adjournment—would be ready for House action about August 17.

Cannon said the measure would provide for outlays of approximately $141,000,000. Of this amount, he said, about $54,000,000 would be earmarked for a two-year Federal building program, providing for new postoffices and other public structures.

Va. Legislative Council Plans Renewed Study

Advisory Group Will Meet to Discuss Progress on New Bills.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Aug 5.—With the general complexion of the State Legislature fairly well determined by the primary elections, the Virginia Advisory Legislative Council prepared today to renew its studies of important legislation to be recommended to the Assembly next January.

Sub-committees of the council, which received $30,000 for its work, already are studying specific matters and probably will meet in toto at an early date to discuss its progress.

Among the matters under consideration are motor vehicle registration, taxes, license fees, highway safety, compulsory liability insurance, the printing laws, causes of crime, compensation and retirement of judges, social security exclusive of old-age pensions which is being studied individually, and soil erosion.

The council is comprised of Senator John S. Battle, of Charlottesville, chairman; Speaker Ashton Dovell, of Williamsburg; Delegate G. Alvin Massenburg, of Hampton; Delegate Haskins Hobson, of Chesterfield; Senator Harvey B. Apperson, of Roanoke; Senator R. R. Parker, of Wise, and Tax Commissioner C. H. Morrissett.

Victor Baravalle To Write Score

Victor Baravalle, one of America's foremost composers and arrangers, is writing the score for "A Damsel in Distress," Fred Astaire's first solo starring picture, which has just gone before cameras. Music and lyrics for the new feature were completed several weeks ago by the late George Gershwin and his brother Ira.

Joan Fontaine is playing opposite Astaire in the production, the cast of which also includes George Burns and Gracie Allen.

2 Md. Boards Meet to Fix Boundary After 50-Ft. Move.

Frederick, Md., Aug. 5.—The commissioners of Frederick and Carroll counties today set about fixing a boundary line more accurate than that which has separated the counties for the past century.

They met on the banks of Pipe Creek, one of the boundary marks, to discuss the matter of locating a true and permanent line between the two counties.

Little Pipe Creek is the cause of the new survey. Its course is said to have shifted as much as 50 feet since Carroll County was formed in 1837 from parts of Frederick and Baltimore counties.

Attention was called to the uncertainty regarding certain sections of the boundary line when Carroll County observed its centennial. The last Legislature passed a bill providing for the new boundary survey.

Before leaving Frederick, the commissioners of this county—A. H. Derr, U. Grant Hooper and Jesse I. Renner, with their clerk, Archley R. Molesworth—took the oath provided in the boundary bill.

At Pipes Creek they met the Carroll commissioners—Charles W. Melville, Norman R. Hess and E. Edward Martin—at a point halfway between Westminster and Frederick, to inspect certain boundary points their engineers had mapped out.

Policemen Prod 'Snake' on Roof; It's Only Rubbish

"The lady says it is a copperhead," the clerk said.

On the roof of the porch they were shown the copperhead, coiled and apparently ready to spring.

The "snake" fell to pieces. It was a pile of waste material.

Star Starts Fad For Potted Posies

Barbara Stanwyck believes she has solved the problem of what to do with a fireplace in the summer. Tired of the black walls of her fireplace, she placed potted tropical flowers in the hearth.

Friends followed the fad, and finally, Al Santell, directing Miss Stanwyck and Herbert Marshall in "A Love Like That," ordered the set dressers of the production to carry out the idea in the film.

Bowled Over American Artists

This diaphonous young distraction is Sandra Storme, one of the leading models of the British Isles, who appears in Paramount's production of "Artists and Models," having been imported to this country for that purpose. She was chosen by Russell Patterson, Peter Arno, McClelland Barclay, John LaGatta and Rube Goldberg, noted illustrators, who also appear in the picture, as one of the most beautiful models ever discovered. It looks like an easy decision.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood Aug. 5

Idol chatter: Simone Simon is not "going Hollywood;" she is just pouting on the Ritz. Wonder if Warner Baxter really believes all of the hair-lifting stories he tells to prove his prowess as an outdoorsman? That new Paramount blues singer, Kea Rea, pronounces her name as if it were spelled Kay Ray. Director's nightmare: Warner Oland, whose dialogue has to be shot one line at a time because he cannot memorize. Cary Grant is so afraid that someone will call him "pretty" that he refuses to let the studio retouch his portraits.

WARNER BAXTER.

Anyone who could keep count of Dixie Dunbar's romances could count the blows of a trip hammer. It still gives me a shock—after years of Hollywood, too— to see a group of "grand dame" extras leave a studio cafe, wielding toothpick. Smile alikes. Slyvia Sidney and Paramount's new Hungarian import, Franciska Gaal. Today's stellar "burned-up": Sonja Henie, who got a $2 parking ticket, gave it to a lawyer and was billed for a $20 fee. Shirley Temple left her bike in the summer sun; hopped on—and off, like a shot from a gun.

Paramount wants Dorothy Lamour publicized as an unmarried girl, so I will just overlook her husband after this. Olivia de Havilland still gets love letters from "the boy she left behind" when she came to Hollywood. Dolores del Rio's bracelets are valued at $75,000. Bob Burns swears he isn't superstitious—but I am wondering, after seeing a horse shoe nailed over his dressing room door. The reason Jeanette MacDonald's hair looks so lustrous is that her maid sprays it with brilliantine twice a day.

In no other business does the working personnel change as rapidly as in the average movie studio. The workmen you see today are often gone tomorrow, for each incoming department head usually sweeps the old regimers out with his first memo. No one is sure of his job and no one is loyal to his studio. That is a Hollywood rule, but—as usual—there is an exception. When I drove into the Hal Roach studio this morning, I was greeted by the same gateman who used to greet me ten years ago. I talked with a production chief who started as a Roach office boy. I visited a set and swapped memories with carpenters who helped build the studio. The office manager, the mail clerk, the janitors, the laboratory crew and the electricians all wear invisible service stripes. Somehow, it makes the day brighter to visit the Hal Roach lot.

You have read so many blown-up "mystery" stories about Greta Garbo that I feel duty bound to pass along this true anecdote which her director told me over a highball last night. A few days ago, he said, an elderly character actress was signed for a small but important bit in the new Garbo opus. She had one scene with Garbo and the thrill of exchanging lines with a Hollywood myth upset her completely. She forgot her lines—muffed her scene time after time. Finally on the verge of tears, she turned to the Garbo and apologized. "I'm so sorry—I guess I'm just stupid." "Don't apologize to me," said Garbo gravely. "I often get nervous and excited myself." According to the director, the next take was perfect.

Hollywood pays so much attention to its reigning stars that most people naturally overlook the importance of the screen's ranking character actors. I had my eyes opened the other day at Warner Brothers. Eight stars and featured players were lined up for a group publicity still and the director asked me which of them, in my opinion, earned the most money. I picked Errol Flynn—and made myself a laughing stock. "Sure, Erroll makes good money," said the director, "but notice the worried looking chap at the end of the line. The name is Edward Everett Horton. He is not a star—but he earns five thousand a week, demands a four-week guarantee, and works 52 weeks in the year. He is one of the three biggest money-makers in Hollywood."

Californian Purchases Estate Formerly Owned by Jefferson

Historic Albemarle Property, Formerly Possessed by Several Notables, Passes Into New Hands; Dwelling to Be Erected at Cost of $75,000.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 5.—By a deed recorded today in the clerk's office of Albemarle County the Pantops property, located two miles east of this city on the Richmond highway and one of the historic estates of this section, became the property of James H. Cheek, wealthy resident of California. Sale price was $37,500.

Eight years ago Pantops was sold by Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Landon White to Paul Goodloe McIntire, widely known benefactor, who in turn presented it as a gift to the University of Virginia. No definite plans for the utilization of the property was announced at the time, but it was understood that the wish of the donor was that it be used by the medical school of the university for the further study of psychiatry and as a convalescent home in connection with the University Hospital.

Pantops was once owned by George Rogers Clark, "Conqueror of the Northwest," whose father was one of the original grantees in 1734. Some years later it was bought by Thomas Jefferson, who gave the unique name—choosing it from the Homeric Greek—"All Seeing," because of its extensive view.

On the site was conducted for 26 years a successful school for boys, known as Pantops Academy, which attracted students from 28 States, besides Canada, Cuba, Mexico, Brazil, Germany, Japan, China, Persia and Siam. Its last principal was Prof. John R. Sampson.

The estate consists of 362 acres, on which are three large two-story buildings, one with 16 rooms and a large central hall; another has 20 rooms and the third has 15 rooms. There are also several outhouses and two five-room cottages.

It is understood that Mr. Cheek will tear down the main building and erect on its site a dwelling to cost between $75,000 and $85,000.

Loudoun Group Re-elects Filler

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Purcellville, Va., Aug. 5.—H. C. Filler, of the New Jerusalem Lutheran Church at Lovettsville, was re-elected president of the Loudoun County Sunday School Association at the fifty-seventh annual convention held in the Bethany Methodist Episcopal Church here today.

The Rev. Guy M. Morrow, Presbyterian minister, was re-elected vice president. Miss Elizabeth Thomas, of Round Hill, was elected secretary-treasurer. The 1938 convention will be held at the St. James Reformed Church at Lovettsville.

Eighteen Sunday schools in the county were represented at the meeting. The theme of the program was "Christ in the Life of the Community."

"Good Earth" Will Lead New Week's Screen

Road-Show Picture Comes Back at Popular Prices to Head Notable List.

"Topper," Hal Roach's screen comedy for release through Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, will be the major feature of the celluloid bill at Loew's Capitol Theater for the week beginning today. In this novelty farce, the principal roles are played by Constance Bennett, Gary Grant, Roland Young, Billie Burke and Alan Mowbray. The story was adapted from Thorne Smith's novel by Eric Hatch, author of "My Man Godfrey." On the stage this week, the Capitol will offer Gus Arnheim and his orchestra as chief feature of the vaudeville portion of the program. The Fox Movietone News and Phil Lampkin's overture will complete the entertainment.

Pat O'Brien, Humphrey Bogart, and Ann Sheridan are cast in the principal roles of "San Quentin," the screen story of great prisons and their inmates, coming to the Warner Brothers Earle Theater for the week beginning today. The story is a timely and vivid one, dealing with matters that have been much in the newspaper headlines of late. A long supporting cast appear in the background ensembles. On the stage at the Earle this week, the headliner will be Mal Ballett and his orchestra, which prides itself on being a complete entertainment unit, rather than mere group of music makers. Paramount News will round out the program.

Beginning today, Loew's Palace Theater will present Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's road-show production of "The Good Earth," at popular prices. In this superb picturization of the Pearl S. Buck novel, the costellar roles are played by Paul Muni and Luise Rainer, supported by a cast of thousands. This is the attraction that was presented at the National Theater last season at an advanced road-show scale of prices.

Marion Davies and Robert Montgomery will be the pictured stars of the bill at the Metropolitan Theater for the week beginning today in "Ever Since Eve," a repeat downtown booking, following its week at the Earle. The program will be augmented by short sound subjects and full newsreel. "Ever Since Eve" concerns a young author and the deception "put over" on him by a clever secretary.

"Easy Living," one of the most delightful screen comedies of the season, will be offered for a repeat engagement as chief feature of the bill for the week beginning today at Loew's Columbia Theater. The costellar roles are played by Edward Arnold and Jean Arthur, supported by Mary Nash, Ray Milland, Luis Alberni, William Demarest, Robert Greig and a score of others.

In its 40-minute news section, the screen bill opening at the Trans-Lux Theater today will feature latest flashes of the International Yacht Races, shots of the City of Baltimore disaster and the Elks' Outing. Among the short film features will be a travelogue on India, a scientific subject dealing with blood corpuscles and Carson Robinson and his "Buckaroos," a musical novelty.

For the week beginning next Sunday, the Rialto Theater will present "Under the Red Robe," as its chief screen feature. A companion attraction will be "LeGong," a picturesque subject filmed on the island of Bali. Corad Veidt and Annabella have the principal roles in "Under the Red Robe," with Raymond Massey, Romney Brent, Sophie Stewart and Lawrence Grant in support.

"Maedchen in Uniform" will continue throughout the remainder of the current week at the Little Theater and may be held over next. When its run is concluded, the attraction at the Little probably will be a revival of "Rose Marie."

Another old-time melodrama will be revived by the Roadside Theater next week, when, beginning Monday night, the bill will be "The Haunted Mill," a chills-and-fever item of the sort the Roadsiders do with such aplomb. A strong cast of the Roadside's best melodrama actors will appear in the principal roles.

Frolicking along at top speed, Glen Echo Park, with its 50-odd amusement devices, is the ideal recreation sport for overheated Washingtonians. The Crystal Pool, variety of thrilling rides, motorboats, etc., etc., afford no end of fun. Next Monday night the ladies will get a break—they will be admitted free to the Spanish Garden Ballroom, where Dave McWilliams furnishes the music and Kitty Simon the songs.

'Number 1' Has Film Significance

The number "one" has been oddly present throughout the filming of RKO-Radio's "Music for Madame."

The picture is the first musical film to use Hollywood as its locale, the first to have its climax actually filmed in the famous Hollywood Bowl, the first RKO starring vehicle for Nino Martini, the first Jesse L. Lasky production for RKO and the first directorial effort of John Blystone for that studio.

Joan Fontaine is teamed with Martini for the first time, and also sings her first song for the screen.

Orchardists Visit Albemarle Farms

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 5 (AP).—Led by Frank E. Merrifield, of this city, manager of the Piedmont Virginia Fruit Growers Association, a party of approximately 20 Connecticut fruit growers today toured orchards in this vicinity and visited Monticello and other historical sites in the county.

Arriving in the city yesterday afternoon from Waynesboro and after stopping at Crozet for inspection of the cold storage and packing plants here, the group was entertained at dinner last night at the Monticello Hotel. An informal meeting with several Albemarle orchardists followed.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, Aug. 5.

SWANK: Al Jolson and Ben Bernie decieed to become swanky at Saratoga this year. They therefore rented a home in the ritziest section, proud that their new neighbors are the Vanderbilts, the Whitneys and the Guggenheims . . . Saturday night Jolson and Bernie ordered a regal repast served and then settled back in their chairs, smoked the finest of cigars and philosophized upon the fates which had brought them from poverty to this station where they could be respected by such eminent neighbors . . . Their meditations were interrupted by the blare of music from their lawn—music which awoke the whole ritzy neighborhood. It came from a honky-tonk Negro band. They were led by a coatless, perspiring conductor who did Bumps after repeated shoutings of "Hello Al. Hello Ben" . . . The conductor was Sam Rosoff.

* * * *

ART: Reginald Marsh, the artist-cartoonist, is doing the new murals at the Custom House. It's a Federal project and so the union men working under Marsh receive more money than he does . . . And because of the WPA cuts and because the job still has to be completed, Reginald Marsh—one of America's most distinguished artists—is listed as a clerk!

* * * *

ANGER: At Newport Saturday night Meyer Davis played at the ball tendered by Mrs. Henry Drummond-Wolff . . . At 4 a. m. one of the British guests in T. O. M. Sopwith's entourage approached the bandmaster and asked: "Will you please play 'God Save the King?' " . . . Davis refused, insisting that it would be inappropriate. "But in England," the Britisher protested, "it's played at every ball and in every night club" . . . "Yes," Davis replied, "but you're in America now." . . . The Britisher walked away sadly.. "Very well," he said, "but this makes it very evident, sir—that you're no friend of England!"

* * * *

PRIDE: Here's the real reason why the Raymond Scott quintet sequences in the new Fredric March-Carole Lombard picture were eliminated. When Scott arrived in Hollywood he was rushed to the studio and the sound-tracks were made of his composition "Minute in Jass" . . . When he appeared on the lot he was informed that his crew would have to don knee breeches and white wigs . . . Scott walked off the lot with but one statement: "Get Milt Britton's band!"

* * * *

MAJESTY: Newspapers reported that King George made his first flight, as king, by flying to the Boys' Club jamboree. This was a personal triumph for the king, who headed the Boys' Club while he was Duke of York . . . After his ascension to the throne a representative of the Boys' Club came to Buckingham Palace and asked the king's aide to name his successor to the head of that organization . . . "Just because I am king," was the ruler's tearful message, "does that mean I have to be dislodged as head of my Boys' Club?" . . . Again the throne tottered, with a Boys' Club as third party, instead of a Mrs. Simpson. But this was easier to settle. King George was permitted to have his way.

* * * *

ENTERPRISE: In the vernal setting of her Sands Point estate, Neysa McMein, the artist, now is painting magazine covers for the December and January issues . . . Her models wear long, heavy furs. And while Miss McMein is busy painting these wintry scenes she tells her models: "Take off those furs whenever you want to—and swim in the outdoor pool!"

* * * *

PLIGHT: Miss McMein's husband, Jack Baragwanath, is now writing his first play. His major difficulty is in disposing of his characters—not one of whom leaves the stage without announcing: "I'm going to grandma's" . . . or "I'm going out to buy a coat" . . . The playwright cornered George Abbott and confided his problem. "This one character here," he stated, "how do I get rid of him?" . . . That's easy," Abbott suggested—and his suggestion was happily adopted. "Just have him say 'Good-by'—and walk off!"

* * * *

DISAPPOINTMENT: Harpo Marx is now visiting at Alexander Woollcott's island in Vermont. In his room there, Harpo discovered one of the newest editions of the Bible. He read it through and was very much interested . . . "There's only one thing wrong with this book," he criticized. "There's nobody to root for!"

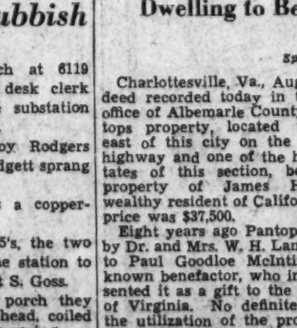
Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

Too many players overlook the fact that the same plays which are proper for declarer to make are available to the defenders. Just as the hold-up play is one of the most useful weapons in the armory of declarer at notrump, so it can be used with telling effect by the defenders. Typical is the case in the hand below:

South, dealer.

Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding.

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
1 NT	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Despite his holding of about 4 honor-tricks, South has no better rebid than one notrump. When North raises the notrump, however, South properly goes to game.

West opens the deuce of spades, and South should properly hold up dummy's Ace. The purpose of this play is partly to prevent the running of the spade suit and partly to preserve dummy's entry to the diamonds. East wins with the King of spades and returns the suit.

On the third round, declarer is compelled to win with dummy's Ace. He should take the club finesse and return a diamond. East must not take the first diamond! If he does, declarer will make his contract with ease, winning four diamonds, three clubs, two hearts and a spade.

If South now leads the high diamond from the dummy, East must win the trick at once, otherwise South will abandon the diamonds, take another club finesse, cash the Ace of clubs, and concede a club. Declarer will, thus, make four clubs, two hearts, a spade and two diamonds.

Note how important it is for a defender who is making a hold-up play to know exactly how many cards declarer has in the suit. In all such cases the critical play is made by the defender who does not have the Ace. He should play his lowest card from three in a suit, but should begin an echo with two or four cards.

Fifteen Hats Made In 48 Hours for Star

Fifteen individually designed hats were created in New York for Katharine Hepburn, and received in Hollywood by air express 48 hours after the order was placed.

Muriel King, who is creating the costumes to be worn by Miss Hepburn and Ginger Rogers in RKO Radio's "Stage Door," spent one hour on the telephone outlining the type of hats needed. John Frederics, in New York, turned his entire establishment over to the job of turning out the hats on time.

Alabama Plans State Fund to Fight Syphilis

State Health Director Says Drugs Will Be Given Free.

By the Associated Press.

Montgomery, Ala., Aug. 5.—Alabama health authorities announced plans today to start an immediate campaign to combat syphilis with State-supplied medicine.

Dr. J. N. Bakere, State health officer, revealed steps he would take to make more universally available such drugs as may be needed to treat cases of syphilis and other venereal diseases, regardless of the financial status of the patient.

Drugs will be supplied free, Dr. Baker said.

Syphilis was directly responsible for 488 deaths in Alabama last year, Baker reported, and indirectly caused many more patients to become victims of other diseases.

Lack of funds, however, Dr. Baker reported, would prevent this State from conducting such a comprehensive campaign at present as that of the antisyphilis crusade by the Chicago Dental Society.

Baker said that, although drugs had been available to physicians for years for the treatment of indigent cases, the financial status of the victim would not be a consideration under the new program.

Chicago Victory Predicted.

Chicago, Aug. 5 (AP).—Dr. Louis Schmidt, chairman of the board of Health's committee for control of venereal disease, predicted tonight a substantial victory in Chicago's crusade against syphilis.

He based his belief, he said, on the public's swift response to approximately 300,000 ballots sent out to determine whether citizens were willing to submit to free, secret blood tests to uncover the presence of the red plague.

"If our citizens take the action indicated in their balloting thus far, it means that Chicago will soon become the first city in the country to actually know where and how much syphilis exists," Dr. Schmidt said.

Sanitary Officer Named.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Aug. 5.—Appointment of William F. Waller as sanitary inspector for the area including Hampshire, Grant and Hardy counties has been made, it is announced.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

"Slowly Being Strangled to Death" by Spying Mother's Supervision, Girl Asks What to Do.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: About six months ago my mother came to live with me, as I am employed here. She found me associating with a man she heartliy disapproved of, because of complications in his life. Several months prior to her coming, when he found he cared for me, he had started proceedings which would ultimately end the complications. However, due to certain circumstances surrounding the case, we realized these proceedings might take two years; and, on the other hand, they might go through in six months. By the time my mother arrived, I had known this man almost a year, had seen him frequently, had met members of his family and his best friends and was completely convinced of his good character and good faith. He was the best friend I ever had or ever hope to have. However, my mother lamented and cried, making herself and myself miserable until I soon promised not to see him any more; or not until he was free.

* * * *

After that, mother was suspicious of all my moves and was constantly accusing me of seeing the man. I was going to night school at the time and was often accused of being with him instead of in class. We finally had a showdown and I confessed I had seen him twice on the tennis court. These were not planned meetings, though each of us knew the other usually played there on Sunday mornings. These encounters were in groups and of a purely platonic nature. Even so, we were very happy to see each other, as we had missed each other painfully.

* * * *

After making this confession, I was forbidden to speak to him on the telephone, to see him or to communicate with him in any way. He is terribly hurt because, while he realizes we should not see too much of each other under the circumstances, he feels he is being treated like a criminal by the person he loves. Neither of us can see any harm in his coming to my home occasionally as a friend. One day he telephoned and asked me to ask my mother if he might call to talk things over. Though I am 23, I asked mother's permission for this favor. It was denied.

* * * *

I have not seen him for several months and my problem is not whether I should renew our friendship. I know my mother would never approve. But what I do want to know is this—after having given up the first and only man I have ever loved, in order to please her, am I not entitled to decent freedom of action?

Must I be continually spied upon? Should I be escorted to the library by my mother to allay her suspicions. When I go on an errand, for instance, and meet a friend and chat 15 minutes I return home to a weeping mother accusing me of meeting this man. Is it fair for my mother to call my office every morning to see if I have gone directly there? Is it fair of her to call my office every evening to see if I go directly home? There are innumerable other injustices I haven't mentioned.

* * * *

I have wanted so much to play tennis, ride, make new friends, to try to forget this man but my efforts to do these things have been thwarted by my mother's suspicions. Now I have no desire to do anything. I am virtually a prisoner and I feel as though I am slowly being strangled to death. I have often invited her with me recently as an evidence of good faith, hoping she would realize this and be big enough to let me go my way alone.

* * * *

Miss Haworth, is it my duty as a daughter to submit meekly to this dictatorship, this spying, as I have done, and let the process of strangulation be complete If not, will you be so kind as to tell me what is the right and fair thing to do to regain my freedom and how I can go about it without too much hurt to my mother?

TWENTY-THREE.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR TWENTY-THREE: The only obligation you owe your mother is to see that you do not dishonor the family name and that she does not want for the necessities of life while you can provide. As a self-supporting woman of legal age it is not only your privilege, but your adult responsibility, to be self-governing; to choose your own friends; to decide whom you shall marry; and to come and go as you please. Naturally, in ordering your life, you should take care to subscribe, both in letter and spirit, to socially acceptable conduct; you should not attempt to be a law unto yourself; you should keep abreast of the best thought and deportment of your generation; and this I assume has been your purpose all along.

* * * *

Only a woman overpowered by irrational fear would act as your mother is acting. It is fairly easy to figure out what she fears. She is far more concerned with promoting certain selfish aims of her own than with furthering your happiness. She is afraid of a lonely latter half of life, deprived of her daughter's support and companionship. Her principal objection to this man is the fact that he is "the first and only man" you have loved; and not the fact that there are "complications" in his life, though the latter has given her a mighty weapon with which to do battle against him. What he really represents to her, although she wouldn't admit it and probably doesn't realize it, is the first serious challenge to her erstwhile full proprietary claims on you.

* * * *

If she were a reasonable woman, rightly concerned with safeguarding your happiness, her first move would have been to cultivate the man's acquaintance in order to determine whether or not he really was a person of good character acting in complete good faith with you. Had she done so and found him wanting, by proven standards, there might have been some justification for putting her foot down on the association. Even then, her interference should have been limited to washing her hands of the affair, after warning both of you frankly that you were making a serious mistake and giving her reasons for so believing.

* * * *

My advice to you is to buckle on an armor of cool, determined courage and have a talk with your mother. Tell her that her sick suspicions, her incessant spying, have gone beyond the point of endurance; that she dishonors both herself and you and that in very self-respect you will tolerate no more of it. Tell her she can either cut it out, go back whence she came, or you will move to another roof; and tell her this is final. Tell her you may have made a mistake in associating with this man, but that it has been a pure miracle that her conduct has not driven you to even greater indiscretion; and that time will tell whether or not he was worthy of your devotion.

* * * *

Tell her, however, that you expect to continue making your own decisions, and possibly mistakes and picking yourself up afterward—for such is a part of the process of growing up—and that from now on you choose your own friends and expect to see them where and when you please. Think your speech through carefully; get the whole subject off your chest; then put on your hat and with a casual explanation of your purpose, go forth to play tennis, ride, or visit friends. If she has hysterics, indulges in lamentations, threats or reproaches, be icy cold and firm in the face of them. Whatever ultimatum you issue as the price of peace between you, live up to. Don't go back on your word, once given, or you will be permanently conquered.

M. H.

'Making Whoopee' In New York Part Of Teachers' Work

New York (AP).—Several hundred school teachers from the little towns and villages of the Midwest and South are whooping it up this summer under the aegis of Columbia University.

As part of their courses at the summer session of Teachers College they are attending ball games, prize fights, night clubs, polo matches and yacht races.

They are eating in French and Spanish, Greek and Serbian restaurants in New York's old world neighborhoods; they are visiting the East Side to discuss politics and child-raising with bearded pushcart peddlers, and they are touring Harlem and Little Italy.

The idea, as explained by their instructor, Miss Roma Gans, as she took them to the ball game at Yankee Stadium today, was to rub the corners off their schoolmarmish attitude and help them to understand better their young charges back home.

"The old-fogey teacher can't win the respect of her children because nobody is so modern as the modern child," said Miss Gans. "Nor can she hope to understand her children if she doesn't know what interests them, and why."

Distinctive New Coiffures for Midseason

All-Revealing New Hats Bring Back Bangs for High Foreheads

By Ethel Ehlen.

The Post Fashion Editor.

WITH "PROFILE" HATS being sponsored by Paris as the last word in fall millinery, and American designers adapting these French creations to the American plan of chic grooming, your coiffure and your face are going to come in for a lot of close inspection. The forehead particularly will need to be beyond reproach, as both hair and hat styles not only expose this part of the face, but draw attention to it. "The profile decides the coiffure," says Emile, noted Washington specialist in hair dressing and beauty culture. To cope with exposed foreheads because of the new hats, Emile is going to reintroduce bangs into his hair styling scheme. "A woman with a very high forehead should have part of it covered—a too great expanse of this part of the face is not beautiful," he commented with much emphasis.

"Coiffures for midseason are small, that is, they are rather flat and hug the lines of the head rather closely, rather than being built out," said Emile. "This is due to the new small, high hats, which are appearing for midsummer and early fall wear. Hair is also shorter, for coolness and to accent midsummer necklines."

Change for the Winter.

But this will all be changed for fall and winter, Emile volunteered, by way of forecast. With the 1900 influence in dress pervading the style picture, coiffures will be built up, high on the head, with more curls than we are accustomed to seeing at present.

While hairdress needs to follow trends and modes to a certain extent because of styles in clothes, if there is to be harmony in the ensemble, yet this is too often overdone Emile contends. The majority of women in America, he believes, are too apt to adopt new whims and styles in hairdressing, whether they are becoming or not. "You can still be in step with any current styling and yet be individual in your choice of coiffure," he said. "And it is possible to be modern in your hair styling without looking like a freak." The natural hairline should be the focal point of interest when creating a coiffure for a woman of any age, or any set of features, regardless of the simplicity or the intricacy of the hair style, Emile maintains.

Trends Over the Years.

Emile, who has been creating coiffures for Washington women for 31 years, and who has dressed the hair of so many Washingtonians—the count has been lost long ago—has seen numerous and diverse changes in hair styling through the years.

"The most beautiful hair-dressing of all was in the era of the French roll or twist," he said. "It was the most flattering and smartest style of coiffure, and that is why I am going to that period for inspiration for many of my present stylings."

Emile has the honor of being elected to act as a judge in Paris, in September, at the "Exposition La Coiffure." There will be more than 10,000 hair dressers from all over the world competing for prizes for unusual coiffures.

Children Help To Solve Their Own Problems

By the Associated Press.

New York.—Put a youngster to work on a typical childhood problem and he will solve it. Not only that. His solution will tally with favored psychological theories.

Dr. Alexander Fichandler, principal of a New York junior high school, made that discovery and nobody could have been more surprised than Dr. Fichandler himself.

He found it out after watching the reactions of a dozen or so children, picked more or less at random, at the conference table of a broadcasting chain (NBC). The children were assembled to discuss frankly problems about which other children all over the United States had written them.

They're Sympathetic.

They've told the results of their conferences to radio listeners on Saturday mornings when they broadcast their program, "Raising Your Parents."

Dr. Fichandler has discovered the parent-raisers sympathize with children who are tired of being supervised every minute. Show your mother you can safely be left to play alone, they say.

They tell a boy who doesn't want to mow the lawn that he should have some responsibility about the house. And he shouldn't expect his parents to pay him, either.

They advise 12-year-old girls who want "boy friends" not to be so serious. Have boys as companions, bring them home, but don't single one out as a favorite. Plenty of time when you grow up, say the parent-raisers. And the books back them up.

The boy-girl problem is one of the commonest, reports Milton J. Cross, who conducts the discussion on the air.

"Girl Wants Boy."

"It's usually girl wants boy, not boy wants girl," he says. But now and again the parent-raisers get a letter like this:

"Should boy and girl be allowed to play together? My answer is yes, because I am a boy of 13, and play with girls part time. There are three girls and four boys and we do have fun."

But the usual boy-girl letter reads: "I am a sophomore in high school. My mother and father are so old-fashioned that they won't let me go out nights with boys . . . I think I should be allowed to go out sometimes, as long as the people that I want to go with are all right."

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Treatment for Hay Fever.

The treatment of hay fever, once an attack is on, is pretty hopeless. The use of eye washes and nose sprays gives a little temporary relief; a substance called estevin dropped into the eye helps most people more than anything else, as do ephedrine sprays. But this is only temporary and not complete at that.

Hay fever, we know, is caused by the pollen in the air—in the fall, pollen from ragweed is the plant almost always responsible. So prevention by using vaccines made by dissolving this pollen in simple salt solutions has been a logical method of treatment. The vaccines must be used very weak at first in order to accustom the body to the material, so this treatment should be begun some time before the season starts. I would advise all hay fever patients to try this method, for when relief occurs it is practically complete, but such relief is not obtained in all cases.

These patients then must choose between enduring the attack, having an air filter in the bedroom and workroom, or going on a vacation.

Air filters or air conditioners are available in many forms and to fit nearly any purse. If a room is kept closed so that all the air that enters it passes through a filter which catches all the pollen, any hay fever patient will be comfortable so long as he remains inside, but this is hard to do continuously for six weeks.

Vacations Not Long Enough.

Vacations which last out the whole hay fever season are also too long to be practical for most people. The heaviest pollen fall, however, occurs in the 20 days from August 20 to September 10, and a vacation during these dates will get one out of his worst suffering.

Where to go? Well, the hay-feverlies themselves found that out, each for his own locale, long ago. The New Englanders go to the White Mountains, most Middle Westerners go to northern Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota or Canada, or to Colorado or California, and the Southerners go to El Paso or the seashore.

Most of these resorts advertise themselves as hay fever refuges, and some physicians think they overstate their claims. When a Great Lakes resort says, "You are practically immune from hay fever at ——" that is about as far they can go with perfect truthfulness. But some of them go further and say, "No sneezing at ——" or "Ragweed and other pollens simply cannot reach ——." There is no place fit for a vacation which ragweed pollen simply cannot reach if the wind is in the right direction. But the amount is very small, and for all practical purposes the claims are justified.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Aug. 5.

IT ISN'T OFTEN, at my age and condition of servitude, what I get out among the minor hot-spots where swing music is swung and the youngsters perch at the ringside and worship at that daffy shrine. But when I do, I always totter into the air with a chuckle and a faint sense of surprise and wonderment.

ALICE HUGHES.

This new cult of swing music not only has me stopped, but pushed back a few yards toward my own goal. I'm probably an old twerp but I can't quite make it out. I learned this all over again a few nights ago when well-meaning chums bundled me into a horseless carriage and deposited me at a Westchester County roadhouse called the White Tower Inn, noted for miles for its astonishing swing band. I collapsed at a table and watched affairs. The lads went into their hottest licks, but to my amazement only half the youths got up and quivered, darted, ducked and slithered. "Why is this?" I demanded of me pals.

They looked at me pityingly. "The ones who are dancing are the local peasantry," they told me. "But the ones sitting with that rapt, heaven-hearing look are young swells who have driven out here just to absorb this gorgeous band. They are the true swing believers, who understand and adore. They consider it impious to dance when such a jam session is on. They listen, and appreciate."

* * * *

Well, that threw me! To think that young, healthy boys and girls knew something that I didn't; that they drank in this welter of mad sound as though Toscanini were conducting Beethoven's Ninth' Symphony." To us Victorians, swing music is nothing much but every saxaphonist and trumpeter for himself. Yet here was idolatry. Laughing insanely, I tossed off my third limeade and staggered into the star-strewn Westchester night. Whipped to a frazz!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—England has plenty of lovelorn, too, who need sound, motherly advice, and one of their leading prophetesses is now in town. She is Marceline D'Alroy, the Beatrice Fairfax of London, who mends hearts in the pages of the London Express. Local newspaper gals are giving her the cordial mitten, for one touch of heartbreak makes the whole world kin, I allus say.

* * * *

The two prettiest girl tennis players on earth are now about town ready for the Wightman Cup matches and the National championships. Our own Californian, Alice Marble, is the entrant of the Blonde School of Thought, while England's lovely Kay Stammers represents the Brunette Addicts. But the girl who may win the title this year is a chunky Pole named (breathe deeply, please), Jadwiga Jedrzejowska! Whew! . . .

We're let off nothing, hot or not! Fur sales are raging here with the murcury at the top of the tube, and now what comes to me but word of a new Ski Style Service run by the alert Mesdames Muriel Johnstone and Helen Freedman, to tell ladies what to wear before, during and after ski-tumbling. My only thought is that if we don't have more snow than we did last winter, the girls are in a mighty risky business, and had better pray hard for a white season!

Former Jobholders Become Best Wives

Ithaca, N. Y., (AP).—Girls who quit jobs to get married have the best chance for marital success, a Cornell University study group has reported.

"The poorest bet of all," the department of Rural Social Organization said, "is the girl who, after finishing school, stays at home with no responsibility either in the home, on a job or in the community."

Exceptions, the department added, are the women who, before marriage, are "very active in community affairs or who are responsible housekeepers in their own homes."

Facts for the study came from 826 couples married from two to six years.

'Be Casual,' Motif For Fall Clothes

"Look casual," is the latest slogan being broadcast to women who are occupied with the question of what to wear for early fall. Although both tailored tweeds and softly-feminine garments will continue to be style-right for particular occasions, it's the casual costume that is slated for high-style acceptance.

Suits are always an early-fall favorite but they were never better calculated to make women want to cast aside their summer clothes.

Handbags, gloves, and shoes carry out the casual feeling. Cocktail and evening bags are subtly ornamented while the severity of many daytime bags is modified by saddle stitching, eyelet lacing, and other trimming details inspired by the season's smart shoes.

Cold Meat Platter Boon to Housewife in Summer; Important in Preparing for Unexpected Guests

Recipes for Several Salads and Loaves Suggested for Hot Weather.

By Rebekah Blake.

A COLD MEAT loaf or a cold platter is a boon to the housewife these hot days, as it saves her spending her time in a heated kitchen and also gives her more chance for recreation. Moreover, it is appetizing and less heavy than hot meats.

Having a supply of cold meats on hand also is a help when visitors drop in unexpectedly. In Washington, where tourists, relatives and friends are especially prevalent in summer, are wise hostess will master the art of the cold meat menus.

If you want to prepare your meal in advance, the cold meat platter may be used to excellent advantage. It can be left for hours on ice and be in readiness to serve when you return from visiting or sightseeing.

Cold Meats Versatile.

Cold meats are versatile in that they can be used for many occasions. They are good for either lunch or dinner for the family or guests. Particularly is the cold-meat platter good for the buffet supper or the "serve-it-yourself" meal, whether it is served from the buffet or table, as a late supper or as one of the regular meals in the day.

Should you want a meat for a picnic lunch or day's outing the assortment of cold meats will go far in helping you solve the problem of sandwiches. They can also be used for sandwiches when you give a party of any kind.

Many varieties of cold meats are available for the cold-meat platter. Among those most often used for the platter are: Liver sausage, jellied tongue, spiced ham, minced ham, large or small ring bologna, salami, boiled ham, head cheese and the various kinds of ready-to-serve loaf specialties.

There are certain dishes that are especially appetizing to serve with the cold-meat platter. Be sure to include at least one hot dish. This may be a hot vegetable or consomme, hot rolls, hot biscuits or hot coffee.

Bread Choice Important.

In choosing you hot vegetable to serve with the cold-meat platter it is better to select one of the lighter variety such as buttered asparagus, sieve beans, green peas, carrots or small lima beans. Irish potato salad, cole slaw, hearts of lettuce, stuffed celery, pickles, sliced cucumbers, sliced green peppers, minced onions or a vegetable salad may be served to advantage with the cold-meat platter.

Care should be exercised in selecting the breads to be served with cold meats. Cheese biscuits, tiny cinnamon buns, scones, Boston brown or bran bread or rolls are excellent complements for such meals. Now that fresh peaches are abundant and inexpensive, many desserts especially appropriate for the cold-meat platter can be made with them.

If you are one of those who prefer to prepare your own cold meat, in loaf or salad, there are many distinctive recipes. Here are some suggestions:

Ham Loaf.

3 cups chopped cooked ham
1 cup soft bread crumbs
2 tablespoons of minced onions
2 tablespoons minced parsley
1 cup of milk
3 tablespoons minced celery
½ teaspoon salt
3 eggs
2 tablespoons butter, melted

Mix ingredients and bake 40 minutes in buttered loaf pan in moderate oven. Unmold and serve hot or cold, cut in slices.

Jellied Chicken Salad.

1 package lemon-flavored gelatin mixture,
1 2-3 cups boiling water
2-3 cup diced cooked chicken
¼ cup of diced celery
2 tablespoons minced parsley
1 tablespoon chopped pimientos
¾ teaspoon paprika
¾ teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons salad dressing
1 tablespoon lemon juice

Dissolve gelatin in water. Cool until thick. Add rest of the ingredients and pour into one large or eight individual molds which have been rinsed out in cold water. Chill until firm. Unmold on lettuce or cress. (Pass additional dressing in a small bowl.

Here are two menus for cold meat meals:

Assorted Cold Meat Platter.

Potato and egg salad
Succotash Buttered Asparagus
Berry Muffin Butter Balls
Peach Mousse Coffee or iced tea

Jellied Chicken Salad With Spicy Salad Dressing.

Buttered Carrots
Brown Diced Egg Plant
Stuffed Celery
Rolls Peach Cobbler
Coffee or Iced Tea

Etiquette for the Teens

Bill's gracious "How do you do" attracted Dorothy the moment he was introduced. No awkward "Pleased to meetcha" spoiled her first impression of him.

When he asked for a date, he said, Let's go to a movie Saturday;" didn't embarrass her with "What are you doing Saturday?"

Calling for her in his car, he didn't honk, but rang her doorbell. As they strolled from parking space to theater, Bill took the curb side. He asked Dorothy where she'd rather sit, told the usher, and dropped behind, letting Dorothy precede him down the aisle behind the usher.

Dorothy's warm smile charmed Bill right from the start. When he suggested going to a movie, she said "I'd be delighted." If she couldn't or didn't want to accept, she'd have said "I'm sorry, but I've other plans."

When Bill called she was ready, didn't discourteously keep him waiting. She let him open the car door for her. While he bought the movie tickets, she stepped to one side, away from the ticket line.

Corn on Cob Lent Different Flavor By Sweet Paprika

Corn on the cob, fresh from the garden or even off the huckster's truck or the distant city vegetable stand, is one of summer's choicest treats. Dripping with butter, seasoned with salt and pepper, it would seem that it had reached the heights of gustatory perfection.

The gourmets, however, ever alert for improvements, have found a new way to make corn on the cob and many other corn dishes even more delicious. When the corn has been seasoned and buttered as usual they add generous quantities of sweet paprika. The result is not only pictorially colorful, but tastily different.

A new way of serving this vegetable, is also finding many pleased recruits. Each person at the table is given an individual portion of butter sauce made by melting one part of butter and stirring in salt, pepper and paprika to taste. The sauce is served in a miniature gravy boat or any small dish and is poured over a small section of the ear of corn with a spoon, as needed.

Paprika also gives added flavor to corn cut from the cob and served either with plain melted butter or with a thin cream sauce.

Washing Removes Film on Furniture

Choose a clean cotton or linen cloth, preferably laundered, which has been soaked in warm water. Wring it out, rub into it a teaspoon or so of green soap—a standard product at any drug store—and run this over the dirty surface in a rotating motion until the soap froths. When the entire surface has been covered with a generous application, take another cloth of similar material, dampen in warm water, wring out and wipe the surface clean. Then wipe it a third time with a clean, dry cloth, rubbing with the grain. The furniture is then ready for polishing.

Hors d'Oeuvres Tasty Served Hot

A POPULAR New York rendezvous is now making a special feature of hot hors d'oeuvres and a mixed green salad topped off with a delicious fruit compote. The dessert is a combination of peach halves, plums and Bartlett pear halves. Served well chilled in an attractive bowl it is truly a delicacy for connoisseurs. Here is a recipe for hot hors d'oeuvres.

Hot Hors d'Oeuvres.

4 slices bread
Grated nippy cheese
1 small can anchovies
1 teaspoon grated onion
3 sweet pickles, chopped
Catchup

Toast the bread and spread with butter. Dip, butter side down, into cheese. Remove any bones and chop anchovies. Mix with onion and pickles and spread around the edges of the toast. In the centers place a tablespoon of catsup. Broil

Doctor Tells Need For Balanced Diet

Don't overeat in summer. This is the warning of Dr. Robert A. Fraser, chief medical director of the New York Life Insurance Co.

Because more time is spent in the open air during the summer months, says Dr. Fraser, larger appetites are developed with the result that many people eat more than is good for them. This overloading of the system together with the frequently debilitating effects of hot weather has a detrimental action on the general system.

However, every person in summer should get three balanced meals a day, the medical director points out. Cereals, eggs, fruit, vegetables, salads and fish should form the bulk of the diet, he says. Plenty of liquid should be taken to make up for the large amounts lost by the body through perspiration.

Liner Brings Back Many From Capital

Canon and Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes Among Those on Manhattan.

Mr., Mrs. Francis de Wolfe Return After Trip to Bucharest.

Washington society was well represented on the New York waterfront yesterday, when the liner Manhattan pulled in loaded with passengers, including several well known here in the Capital.

Among the first to walk down the gangplank were Canon and Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes, who, with the others on board, had as their shipmates on the voyage the winners of the Davis Cup, headed by the fiery Donald Budge. Canon Stokes went to England to attend the World Congress on Church, Community and State held in Oxford, and he and Mrs. Stokes are expected in Washington tomorrow evening, though only for a stay of about three weeks. Afterwards Canon and Mrs. Stokes expect to go to their extensive estate in conservative Lenox in the Berkshires. Their daughter, Miss Olivia Stokes, is still in the Southwest, and their home on Massachusetts avenue has been closed most of the summer.

Our newly appointed Ambassador to Cuba, J. Butler Wright, was on the pier to meet Mrs. Wright and their daughters, the Misses Mary and Edith Wright, when the Manhattan chugged up North River yesterday. The Weylin Hotel in New York will be their home until they sail August 12 for Havana. Since leaving Prague, where Mr. Wright served as Minister until his new appointment, Mrs. Wright and her daughters have been staying in Paris. Mr. Wright has been here, residing at the Chevy Chase Club.

Among their fellow passengers was another State Department official, Francis de Wolfe, who is returning from the International Radio Consulting Committee conference held in Bucharest, Rumania, from May 21 to June 8. He was accompanied by Mrs. de Wolfe, and, on the theory that once in Europe it would be too bad not to travel a bit, they visited points of interest on the continent after the conference ended.

Today will see them back in Washington again, at their historic house at 3322 O street, in Georgetown, once the Russian Legation. During the absence of the De Wolfes their home was occupied by Wallace Murray, of the State Department, and Mrs. Murray, who are now re-installed in their apartment at 1868 Columbia road.

Walter Evans Edge, former Ambassador to France, chose a French ship—no less than the Normandie, in fact—when he sailed earlier in the week for a vacation in Europe. He was accompanied by Mrs. Edge and their two daughters, who will study in Switzerland while their father and mother hunt grouse in the shooting preserve they have taken for the season in Scotland. Mr. and Mrs. Edge have been at their summer home in Bath, Me., until they set sail from New York.

The Minister of the Irish Free State, Michael MacWhite, has returned to his apartment at the Shoreham from Emergency Hospital, where he was ill with pneumonia.

THE GIRLS of the Somerset 4-H Club left yesterday afternoon for the Maryland 4-H Club rally at College Park. They will be there until Tuesday of next week, housed in a college dormitory and taking their meals in the college dining room.

There will be several campfire programs in which both the boys and girls of different groups will join, and the closing night an impressive candle light ceremony will be staged. The fashion show in which several of the Somerset girls will participate is to be Monday. Edwina Hambleton, who won the gold medal for her costume at the Montgomery County rally last week in Germantown; Helen Bryan, president of the club, Caroline Gould, and Jean and Nancy Hambleton will style their dresses and coats. Demonstration work, handicraft and sports will fill the remainder of the time for the girls during the period of the convention.

Margaret Saylor and Lois and Pauline Gish were taken to College Park by Margaret's father, Leon Saylor; Mrs. James I. Hambleton, leader of the Somerset Club, took her three daughters, Edwina, Jean and Nancy and Mrs. Anthony Gould took her daughters, Marjorie and Caroline, and Betty Jane Bryan.

Helen Bryan, despite the fact she is club president, will be unable to go until tomorrow as she is assistant supervisor of Somerset Playground this summer and cannot get away except for the week-end.

Women 'Sob' Over 213's Tombstone

Government Workers' Council Celebrates Cupid's Victory.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

"Here lies 213—Born, June 28, 1932; died, July 26, 1937. Tears cannot bring it back, therefore we weep."

The above inscription was on the tombstone at the "grave" of Section 213 of the national economy act, whose demise was celebrated last night by Government Workers' Council of the National Women's Party. A supper was given in the garden of Alvah Belmont House, National Party headquarters, and the "grave" in the old carriage house had been artistically arranged by Mrs. Grace Cochran and Mrs. Page Kirk, members of the executive committee of the council.

Guests, most of whom had helped in the five-year fight for the repeal of the measure, known as the "married persons clause," went to view the remains, but not to weep. Six little mourners stood around the "grave," their black skirts labeled: "Woman's Place Is in the Home," "Inefficiency," "European Trends," "Lack of Vision," "American Pedestrian Protective Association" and "Economic Dependence for Women." A spray of cardboard bleeding hearts "from those who knew the departed" was marked "attack on the merit system," "loss of pension" and so forth.

Members of Congress Honor Guests

Members of Congress who assisted in the repeal of the bill had been invited as guests of honor, and all went cheerfully to visit the "grave" before supper was served.

Among those who attended were Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, of Massachusetts; Representative Caroline O'Day, of New York; Representative Gerald J. Boileau, of Wisconsin; Representative Robert Ramspeck, of Georgia, and Representative Bert Lord, of New York, who is a cousin of Mrs. Edwina Austin Avery, chairman of the Government Workers' Council.

There were no addresses of even short talks last night; it was a party at which everyone was expected to have a good time and none to be burdened with the responsibility of speech-making. The Gertrude Parsons trio played during the supper, which was a buffet with small tables in the garden at which the guests were seated. There were also dances presented by Shirley Ann Gessford, young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Leslie Gessford and a granddaughter of the late Harry Gessford, who was former chief of police of the District.

Mrs. Avery received the guests as they arrived between 5 and 7 o'clock, and members of the executive committee acted as hostesses. These included Mrs. Cochran, vice chairman; Mrs. Vera Johnson, Congressional chairman; Mrs. Grace Brewer, secretary of the committee; Mrs. Florence Heath, Mrs. Helen Forbes, Mrs. Abbie Owen, Mrs. Emily Newnam, Mrs. Hilda Weinerth, Mrs. Gladys Whalley, Mrs. May Gross and Mrs. Lillian Niccum.

Among members of the National Council of the National Woman's Party who were there were Miss Laura Berrien, Mrs. Bernita Shelton Matthews, Miss Martha Souder, Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, Miss Anita Pollitzer, Miss Ida Als and Mrs. Mildred Palmer, chairman of the New York branch, who is here for several days.

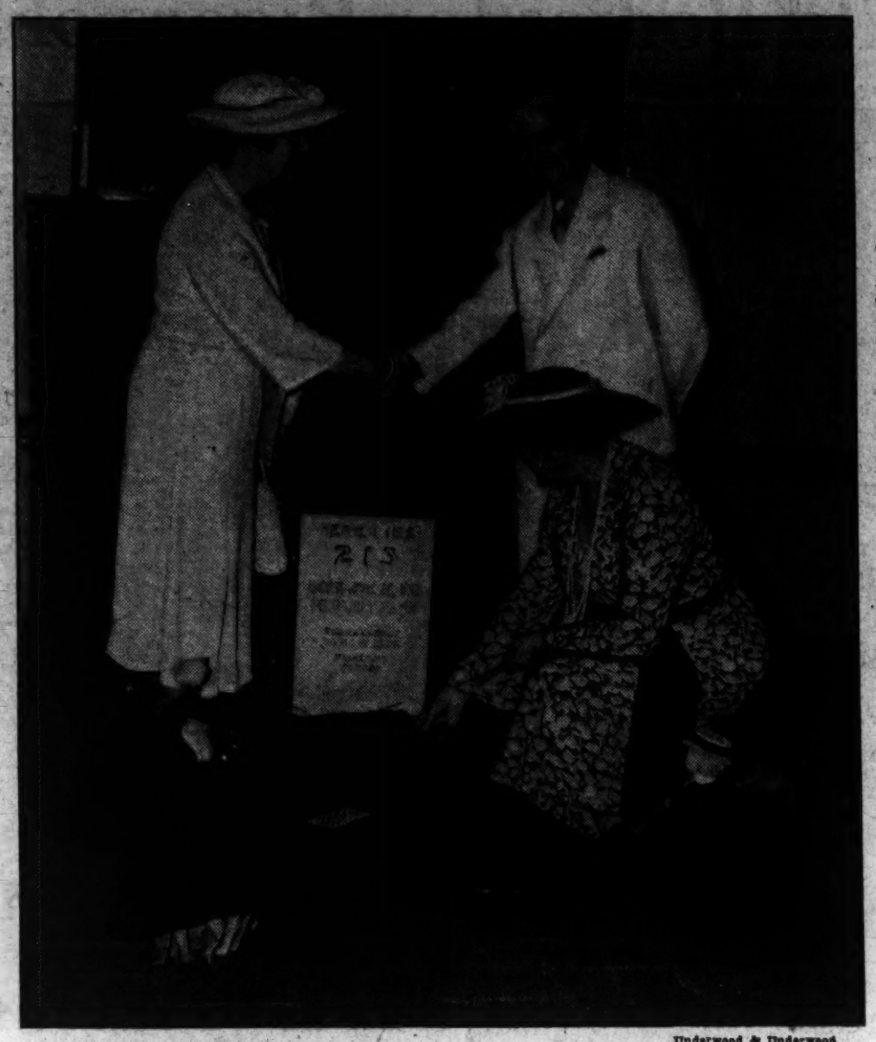
Magazine Tells Story of Fight

Available to the guests were copies of the August issue of "Equal Rights," the Woman's Party magazine, in which is an article "And So the Bill Was Passed," written by Mrs. Avery, telling of the actual repeal of the measure and reviewing the history of the long struggle for its accomplishment.

About 150 members of the council and their friends attended the supper.

Mrs. Avery wore a white organdy frock embroidered in green, a broad-brimmed white hat, and carried a fluffy green handkerchief matching the figure in her dress. Representative O'Day was in a costume of black and white and carried a small black fan. Representative Rogers, who had come directly from the Capitol, wore a white suit with a red and white flower in the lapel, and carried an envelope of papers under her arm, without which, she remarked, nobody would recognize her. The garden presented its usual artistic setting, and the great Dutch elm, nearly 200 years old, spread its branches over the brick court.

Government Workers' Council Makes 'Grave' for 213



All of the guests at the buffet supper given at the headquarters of the National Woman's Party were taken into the old carriage house to read the inscription on the "tombstone" before supper was served. Mrs. Grace Cochran and Mrs. Page Kirk were responsible for the official "burial" of the recently repealed measure, marking the end of the five-year fight.

Representative Edith Nourse Rogers and Representative Robert Ramspeck shake hands in a cheerful greeting over the "remains" of Section 213 of the national economy act, whose demise was celebrated last night at Alvah Belmont House by the Government Workers' Council of the National Woman's Party. Representative Caroline O'Day, at the right, arranges paper bleeding hearts on the "grave."

This Work, However, Is Only Small Part of Society's Duties; Many Young Women Now Attracted By Work of Organization.

A young passenger stepped from the train yesterday morning on her way from Atlantic City, N. J. to Miami, Fla. She was 6 years old and all alone except for a large doll. She wore blue slacks and a merry smile—and was met at the train by Miss Mary Ella Henderson, one of the case workers of the Travelers Aid Society—which is the point of the story.

If it were not for the Travelers Aid, little persons like her could not go on long trips from mother to grandmother with only a dolly for company. She had just 15 minutes in Washington and during that time was in the friendly care of Miss Henderson. Then she was put in charge of the conductor, who looks out for her until she reaches Jacksonville, where she will be met and cared for by another Travelers Aid worker and put on the train again for the final lap of her destination.

Contrary to the general concept of such workers, as motherly, gray-haired women, members of the staff in Washington look like college girls. The average age of the eight case workers is 26, and they all are attractive and business-like—all equipped, too, with college degrees and two years additional special training in social service work.

They are under the supervision of Miss Beatrice Hodgson, assistant to Mrs. Margaret Ford, executive secretary of the society here. Only a small part of their work is meeting children or other transients who need special assistance at the railroad terminal. They handle all problems relating to transients in Washington—and persons who have been here less than a year come under that heading.

Executive Secretary Here 11 Years

Mrs. Ford came here 11 years ago from New York City, where for four years previous she had been at the headquarters of the National Travelers Aid. Before that she had served with the Interdepartmental Social Hygiene Board during the war and as director of the Commission of Charities and Corrections in the State of Arkansas for two years. She is a graduate of the Chicago School of Social Work Administration.

In the beginning of her administration, the Washington branch of the society maintained only a station service, giving directions and aid to travelers there, but referring special problems to other agencies. All went well until unemployment swept the country in 1931. A survey was made under the Council of Social Agencies, which revealed it best to have the transient problem centralized in one agency and the Travelers Aid then took over the case work such as it does now, adjusting the difficulties of transients, just as those of residents are adjusted by other agencies. Wherever possible, they are returned to their former homes, and thus hundreds of dollars is saved the District in the care of destitute cases.

In 1933, the Transient Bureau of FERA took over the case work, but that department suddenly was terminated in 1935 and the Travelers Aid again took it over and has handled it since.

The problems are as diverse as are the people and the sections from which they come. There are the unemployed, 1,239 of whom were helped last year; the ill or disabled, 520 of whom were looked after; stranded families, 1,009; children alone, 1,885; those needing relief, 2,594, and those wanting advice and information, 21,548.

Runaway Is Always a Problem

"Human interest stories? Hundreds in a day," says Miss Hodgson. "Among the many different kinds of problems, one we have always with us is the runaway. He is not necessarily a bad boy or one from a humble home. Any of us might have him in our family and find him nothing in particular to be ashamed of. He just feels the urge to leave home and follows it."

Miss Henderson told of a youth—a lad of 14—from a Southern city who landed in Washington early the morning before Mother's Day. He applied at the information desk of the Travelers Aid for direction to an inexpensive room, explaining he planned to meet his brother here. "On what train does he arrive?" inquired Miss Henderson, sensing there was more to the story. The boy didn't know. It required a few minutes more plus another question or two to bring an admission from him that he had run away from home. In 24 hours he was on his way back to mother.

Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick will no doubt be surprised to learn the boy made up his mind to leave home while listening to one of his broadcasts over the radio. Young people should make their own decisions, said Dr. Fosdick—and the lad, who had been irritated by algebra and other high school subjects for which he could figure out no use made his and acted on it. He took his mother's car, drove part way and then boarded a train. But when he had time to think it over, he didn't feel quite right about it and the Travelers Aid case worker, always ready to help in time of need, straightened things out and sent him homeward rejoicing—in time for a happy Mother's Day.

Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone is chairman of the board of the Travelers Aid, which receives its support from the Community Chest. There is also a volunteer service committee composed of Junior League members, which includes Mrs. John Farr Simmons, chairman, Mrs. George Beale Bloomer, Mrs. Donald Hiss, Mrs. Godwin Moore, Mrs. James Fuller, Miss Mary Jane Pelley, Mrs. E. K. Morris and Mrs. Andrew Saul.

Expert Designs Room to Match Personalities

Interior Decorations Now Suited for Brunettes, Blondes, Red Heads.

LONDON (U.P.).—Rooms for lovelies, for blonde and goldilocks, Titian and red-head, brunette and silver haired, are in vogue, according to Miss Christine Veasey, well-known British furnishing and decoration expert.

Miss Veasey demonstrated how easily a woman may enhance her beauty and make her personality more effective by carefully introducing into her surroundings colors, decorations and furnishings which harmonize with her particular "type." Model plans for interiors were worked out.

She declared that although women spend millions of dollars every year on clothes and on aids to beauty to achieve individual charm, too often their personality is lost even in their own homes because of their neglect to see that their surroundings live up to their looks.

Accessories are in cerise. Natural waxed oak furniture combines beauty with economy in space. A divan has a tailored cover in corn color. The ensemble suggests an exotic atmosphere that for its strong contrast is particularly flattering to the dark haired woman.

Palma violet shades for carpets and coverings with a background of pale green walls and curtains make a charming bedroom setting for the woman with Titian hair. The furniture is sycamore to harmonize with the creamy texture of her skin. Light green wallpaper, relieved with mauve and silver points, provides a novel and attractive panel behind the bed. Silver metallic cloth is used for the upholstered bedhead and also for the piping of an easy chair and dressing stool.

For the blonde and golden-haired girl Miss Veasey prefers a background of pale blue walls to match her delicate coloring. She suggests a lounge with pale blue curtains in heavy satin. In contrast is a carpet of plum, verging on Magenta. The furniture is straight-grained walnut of elegant design. Instead of a conventional three-piece suite there are on each side of the fireplace two high-backed sofas upholstered in plum-colored satin and piped with the same blue as the walls, and there is a modern bench covered in blue with a bookshelf beneath. Accessories are in blue morocco.

Drove out to Rippon Lodge the other day and it's as lovely in August, as in June, when the rambler roses are climbing all over the historic old house—the time when Mr. and Mrs. Wade H. Ellis and Mrs. Ellis' sister, Miss Luella P. Chase (regent of Susan Reviere Hetzel Chapter), entertain the District of Columbia Daughters of the American Revolution each year.

There are coral-colored cannas blooming in the flower beds and presenting bright spots of lovely color as you look over the broad vista toward the Potomac River. Mimosa trees are blooming in a border along the old lane, leading riverward; a great weeping willow shades the little pool at one end of the garden. Crickets chirp in the fragrant woods which shelter the old burying ground, where for generations members of the Blackburn family were laid to rest.

At the other side of the estate a high rustic bridge leads across a picturesque ravine which winds down to the river.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellis, who abandoned their original plan for another trip abroad this summer, have spent nearly every weekend there and have entertained their friends with the hospitality for which Rippon Lodge has always been known.

A house in which Washington was a frequent visitor and designed by the same architect who drew the plans for Mount Vernon, the country home of the Ellises is one of the most beautiful of the historic river farms near the Capital, and has the added charm of being owned by a descendant of the family to which it originally belonged. For only two years in more than 200 has it been out of the hands of the Blackburns or their heirs (Mr. Ellis' mother was a Blackburn).

Pilot, a Great Dane pup, 8 months old, adds a new bit of interest to the place just now. He is already half the size of a small colt, and as playful as a fox terrier. He romps over the lawn, runs through the woods, jumps over the ancient box hedges and takes a lively interest in everyone who comes visiting.

MRS. JOHN HERBERT HALLORAN, who is here from Sheffield, England, with her young daughter, Sheila, has been having a reunion with her sorority sisters in Zeta Tau Alpha. She is visiting her mother, Mrs. French Smith. It is her first trip to this country since she was married in 1930 and later went to England to live. Her husband is a lecturer in the department of education of Sheffield University.

Mrs. Robert A. McCallum entertained for her this week at a tea at which members of the Washington alumnae of the sorority were present, including many who were active in sorority affairs when both the guest of honor and the hostess were students at George Washington University. Tonight Mrs. Melvin Holley, of Damascus, Md., is giving a party in honor of Mrs. Halloran, and there has been a series of other informal affairs for her ever since she has been here. She is sailing August 11 on her return to England.

AN INTERESTING luncheon with much talk of "Scouts," "Scouting" and "Camp May Flather" was that given by Mrs. Campbell E. Waters at her home in Chevy Chase Wednesday. Mrs. Waters is commissioner of District 3 of the Girl Scouts—the district comprising Cabin John, Kensington, Rockville, Edgemoor, Battery Park, Bethesda and of course Chevy Chase. The guests of honor were Mrs. Robert V. Laughlin of Kenwood and Mrs. Scott Ewing and Mrs. William H. Bailey, of Chevy Chase, who will go August 14 to Camp May Flather to take the scout leaders' course. Mrs. Harold C. Bryant and Mrs. W. D. Appell, who attended the course of training last year, told the prospective "enrollees" about the course. Others in the company were Mrs. J. Wesley Buchanan, chairman of training and personnel, and Mrs. Guy Cook, chairman of finance of District 3.

Parley Planned In September For Chi Sigma

Alpha Province of Chi Sigma Sorority has set September 16, 17, 18 and 19 for its annual conference. The sessions will be held at one of the hotels in Washington, as the province embraces only the ten chapters in the Capital.

The Washington chapters boast the distinction this year of having two national officers, Miss Mary Lou Colliflower, who was elected national secretary at the convention recently held in Toronto, Canada, and Miss Josephine Sullivan, who was elected national treasurer, an office formerly held by Miss Colliflower.

Miss Sullivan, who is the retiring president of Alpha Province, will preside at the September conference. The program will include business meetings Thursday and Friday evenings, a banquet and dance Saturday night, a memorial service Sunday morning and cocktail party on Sunday afternoon. Details of the sessions will be completed at a business meeting called for August 18 at the Mayflower Hotel, at which the various committees which are now working out arrangements will make their reports.

The sorority has a membership of approximately 650 in Washington, but of this number only 400 are active.

The District, however, was well represented at the recent convention in Canada at which the two Washington girls were elected to national offices. The delegates were Miss Esther Beale, from Alpha Chapter, of which Mrs. Julia Yokum is president; Miss Doris Judge, Beta; Miss Connie Cooksey, Gamma; Miss Lydia Monagham, Delta; Miss Genevieve Heuisz, Zeta; Miss Eileen Hayes, Theta; Mrs. Helen McAinish, Lambda; Mrs. Melva Stewart, Alpha Gamma, and Miss Dorothy Luckett, of Alpha Zeta, all presidents of the chapters they represented.

Miss Mary Elisabeth O'Connor is president of Iota Chapter, of which Miss Colliflower is a member and from which there were present at the convention, Miss Colliflower, Miss Mary Columbus, Miss Loretta Mansfield, Miss Evelyn Wynn, Miss Margaret Loffett and Miss Rozelle Kirby.

Women's Posts Pick Delegates For Convention

Ball, Supper Will Climax Legion Sessions Here Next Week.

THE MOST IMPORTANT event of the month for the American Legion, including the women's posts, will be the department convention at the Mayflower August 12-14. The climax of the sessions will be the ball and buffet supper on the closing night.

Delegates to the convention were named by the women's posts at their July meetings. That of the Jane A. Delano Post was an anniversary party in addition to a meeting at which business was discussed. It was held at the home of Benjamin G. Maynard, brother of the post commander, Miss Eleanor Maynard, in Highland Park, Arlington. The eighteenth anniversary of the organization of the post was celebrated—it was the first post of nurses to receive a charter from the American Legion.

Miss Maynard, Mrs. John T. Long, Mrs. Mabel Day and Miss Laura Stewart were elected as delegates to the department convention, and Mrs. Loretta Maloy, Mrs. May Lee Reinoehl, Mrs. Isabel Knight and Miss Ethel Carson, alternates.

Pre-Meal Assembly Is Restless Period.

The 300 Washington Boy Scouts at Camp Theodore Roosevelt on Chesapeake Bay sometimes find pre-meal assemblies a little prolonged, especially after hours in the outdoors which build hearty appetites. But it is here that camp programs are outlined. The boys above are listening to an instructor and are primed to speed to the mess tent as soon as they are dismissed.

Sailing before a stout breeze is one of the many pleasures at the camp, which is equipped with two sail boats and many canoes and row boats. The sail boats frequently are used for long cruises, during which valuable information regarding the sea is picked up. A land Boy Scout is not above turning nautical if given an opportunity.

Swimming Periods Find No Laggards.

"The last one in is a sissy!" When the swimming period rolls around every Scout is ready for a plunge in the tangy water of the bay. The "buddy" system is used, the Scouts swimming in pairs, one checking on the safety of the other at all times. In Camp Roosevelt's 19 years there has been no accident of consequence. The boys above are poised on a pier, ready for the water.

All is not play at Camp Roosevelt, but study periods are so interesting they can not be compared with school classes. Browns Amass Early Lead to Take Second in Row From Nats, 7-4

Ranger Wins Fourth Race, Retains America's Cup

The Washington Post Sports

* X WASHINGTON: FRIDAY, AUGUST 6, 1937 19

Travis Gets Three Hits to Retain Lead

Appleton Driven From Mound; Nats Unable to Bunch Blows.

By Shirley Povich.

St. Louis' Gas Meter Gang, so-called because they have been hovering around the American League cellar since the season started, made nine hits do better work than the Nats' 14 yesterday and came up with a second straigh victory over the Washingtons.

The Browns won the ball game, 7 to 4, despite the discrepancy in hits, because they crammed all of their nine blows into the first five innings, while the Nats were scattering their shots throughout the afternoon.

Too late, Manager Bucky Harris received some clever pitching by Ed Linke and young Ken Chase, who held the Browns hitless and runless in the last four innings. The Nats were quite helpless in their attempts to do something about that 7-to-0 lead Pete Appleton had pitched to the Browns earlier in the game.

Travis Gets 3 for 5.

But Cecil Travis' private batting show, which is now overshadowing the Nats' collective efforts to win a ball game, was good again yesterday. The Nats' slugging shortstop, who went into the game leading the league in hitting with his .388 average, came out of it with those figures intact when he bashed the St. Louis pitching for three hits in five appearances at bat.

Neither could young Buddy Lewis be blamed much for the Nats' defeat. He matched the slugging of his roommate, Travis, and even outdid him with four hits in five trips to the plate. But when the Nats needed a nice juicy hit in those late innings with men on bases, there was no hit forthcoming.

Lou Koupal, who is not rated among the better pitchers in the league, hog-tied the Nats while the Browns were heaping up their seven runs against Appleton. For five innings, he was pitching two-hit ball, and didn't allow a run until the sixth. When he encountered a bit of trouble in the eighth, old Elon Hogsett relieved Koupal and left-handed the Nats into submission.

The bottom of the Brownie batting order lit into Appleton in the second inning to give Koupal a 4-0 lead. A pair of singles by Clift and Bell and a walk to Davis had filled the bases with one out, when Carey bashed a hit past Travis and knocked two of his pals home. Carey dashed to second on a throw to the plate and then Koupal himself, of all people, banged a single to center to score the third and fourth runs of the inning.

Chase Pete in Fifth.

They picked up another in the third when Bell thumped a mighty two-bagger to the centerfield wall to score Vosmik, and in the fifth they got Appleton out of there with a two-run uprising featured by Clift's triple down the leftfield line and Davis' double to center.

The Nats didn't make even an impression against the right-handed Koupal until the sixth, when Lewis tripled to right-center and Travis singled to center, but the hopes for a big inning faded when Simmons struck out and Stone flied to Bell. Kuhel's single that followed was utterly wasted.

Three hits could bring the Nats only one run in the seventh, but they conjured visions of a tie score in the eighth when four of the first five men to face Koupal reached base. Almada drew a walk and with one out, Myer, Millies and Pinch-Hitter Wes Ferrell singled. But Hogsett came in and the damage was limited to two runs, because Sington struck out and after Lewis filled the bases by beating out a hit to first, Travis, who had made three straight hits, could lift only a short fly to Vosmik.

It was not very inspiring.

Yanks Spank Chisox, 13-8; Gehrig Star

Iron-Man Clouts 2 Home Runs; Powell Is Hit by Pitched Ball.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 5.—Featuring the continued clouting of iron horse Lou Gehrig, who banged out two homers, the Yankees walloped the Chicago White Sox, 13 to 8, today by staging an eight-run rally in the eighth inning, thereby sweeping the four-game series.

The win, which boosted the Yanks' American League lead to nine full games and dropped the White Sox back into third place, was a costly one, since Jake Powell, Yankee outfielder and batting hero of last year's world series, was put in the hospital by a pitched ball in the fourth inning.

One of Monte Stratton's fast ones clipped him high over the left ear and felled him. He was carried to the clubhouse on a stretcher, and then taken to a hospital, after a preliminary examination determined he had suffered an injury to the ear.

Stratton didn't last long after the accident. In the fifth, his arm suddenly went sore and he was replaced by Clint Brown. That's when the trouble started for the Sox.

Up to that point, they were leading 3-1. Gehrig greeted Brown with his first homer of the game and his twenty-fourth of the year with a mate aboard to feature a four-run rally in the fifth. The Sox pulled up afterward to lead 7-5 in the first half of the eighth, but that was the end of their pace-making.

An Old Sea Tale With a New Twist

Dooly Reaches Semifinals of Middle Atlantic Tourney, While Pennsylvanian and Foe Offer Masterful Performance.

By Bob Garrison.

Dennison L. Mitchell, better known to local tennis fans as "Dooly," continued to stay one jump ahead of the diminishing field when he romped past Frank Shore, seeded No. 5, yesterday in straight sets to establish himself as the first semifinalist of the Middle Atlantic Men's Singles Tournament now in progress at the Edgemoor Club courts, Edgemoor, Md.

But while Mitchell, No. 1 player in the second renewal of the sectional championship, was moving one step nearer the title and the Washington Post trophy, with an easy, 6—2, 6—2, win from his fellow Edgemoor Club member, the show of the afternoon was being put on in a fourth round match between Frank "Buddy" Goeltz, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., and Lieut. James Farrin, former Naval Academy star.

Possibly the bes' tennis match of the year in this vicinity flew off the racquets of the two seasoned players, who entertained a handful of fans with two hours of sensational tennis. Goeltz, 31-year-old truckman, finally outlasted the 29-year-old naval officer, 6—4, 7—9, 6—2, to enter the quarter final round.

Goeltz, No. 1 foreign entry, started off in grand fashion, compltely routing the net game of his youthful appearing opponent. His lobbing was accurate, his drop shots were perfect, and the set was his when he won the tenth game at love. But in the second .et, Farrin, seeded No. 7, called upon all his naval reserve and, by keeping away from the net and awaiting Buddy's errors, he jumped a quick 5—2 lead.

Fighting just as hard, and displaying a brand of tennis any coach would desire his pupil to watch, Goeltz rang up buzzing placements to draw even in games, 5-all, then went ahead, as Farrin, again rushed the forecourt, 6-5. Games went with service until the fifteenth, when Farrin broke service and won the set by holding his own, 9-7.

Farrin, although in perfect condition, bowed in the third set, as he was outsteadied by Goeltz, 6-2. After the Pennsylvanian had taken a 2-0 lead in games, he dropped the third game, which required the best tennis imaginable. Incessant rallies kept the game, which was at deuce six times, going for 15 minutes.

In another fourth-round match, Bill (Barron) Breese took up where he had left off the day before—at the end of the first set—and eliminated Ray Stocklinski, public parks star, 13—11, 6—1. Stocklinski had pressed the former Harvard player in their first set, but was swamped by the left-hander in the second set. He won the first game by scoring 5 points, but was unable to accumulate more than 6, as he then dropped as many games in a row, and the match.

Today's matches, three quarter-final events, pit Tony Latona, No. 4 player, against Frank Goeltz, at 4 p. m.; Hugh Lynch, No. 2, against Lieut. William Howard, and Billy Contreras against Bill Breese, both at 5 p. m. Temporary stands have been constructed for the remaining tournament play, which includes semifinals tomorrow and finals Sunday. Admission is 25 cents.

Red Sox Win 9th Straight; In 2d Place

Newsom Checks Indians, 5-4, and His Triple Is Factor in Victory.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Aug. 5.—The Red Sox took over second place in the American League today by whipping the Cleveland Indians, 5 to 4, for their ninth straight victory, a clean-up of the four-game series, and the thirty-first triumph in their last 37 home games.

Buck Newson limited the Indians to eight scattered hits.

The Indians, trailing by two runs entering the seventh, pulled into a 3-3 tie when Hale walked and Pytlak drove out a line drive that went for a homer within the grounds.

The Sox went into the lead in their half when Newson tripled and scored on Mills' long fly and added what proved to be the winning margin in the next inning when Foxx singled, was sacrificed along by Higgins and scored on a single by Oscar Melillo, who replaced the lame Eric McNair at second.

Powell Struck On Head, Goes To Infirmary

Stratton's Fast Ball Hits Yankee Outfielder; Ear Is Injured.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 5.—Jake Powell, New York Yankee outfielder, was hit by a pitched ball in the fourth inning of today's game with the Chicago White Sox and had to be carried off the field on a stretcher.

One of Monte Stratton's fast balls struck Powell high over the left ear. He fell to the ground, his feet kicking wildly, and then appeared to lapse into unconsciousness.

He will remain in the hospital for observation, at least overnight.

Powell's injury cuts the Yankees' outfield squad to an absolute minimum of three. Today's incident was the latest in a series of mishaps that have befallen the world champions' fly-chasing brigade all season.

Powell was out with appendicitis early in the campaign. Then George Selkirk was cut down more than a month ago with a broken ankle.

American Boat Sets New 30-Mile Record

Vanderbilt Brings Defender Across Finish Line Half Mile Ahead of British Challenger—Winner First Amateur to Win 3 Times Straight.

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

Ranger crossed the finish line of a 30-mile triangular course with a winning margin of 3 minutes 37 seconds, equivalent to about 1,000 yards, after being handed the final race on a silver platter by the big blue challenger's premature start, the first in America's Cup history.

Sopwith, trapped between the starting buoy and his rival as a result of his over-anxiety to make a split-second getaway, virtually was forced to cross the line too soon. Caught much like a base-runner between the bags, the Britisher was nine seconds past the line when the starting signal sounded, while Vanderbilt again gauged his getaway perfectly.

Made Fresh Start.

Forced to jibe around the buoy for a fresh start, Sopwith's blunder cost him exactly 1 minute 15 seconds and gave Vanderbilt an opportunity to build up a windward margin that settled the outcome. It converted what might have been a real boat race into another parade.

After this debacle, the challenger actually outfooted the defender over the last 20 miles of the course, sailed in brisk breezes that ranged from 12 to 16 miles per hour. It was the first time since the series started that Endeavour showed superiority, but it came too late to have much effect. All it did was keep the British boat from being outclassed and reduce Ranger's final margin by around a half-minute.

In turning back Sopwith's second bid for the "old mug" and clinching his third successful defense of the cup in succession, the 54-year-old American skipper made his sweep of four straight races something to remember him by.

Vanderbilt not only duplicated his feat of taking four in a row from Sir Thomas Lipton's last Shamrock in 1930, when Enterprise was the defending sloop, but concluded the current series with a record of eight successive victories over a Sopwith challenger. Rainbow, the 1934 defender, took the last four from Endeavour I after losing the first two tests.

Taken 12 of 14.

Vanderbilt now has captured 12 out of 14 cup races. Only one other man in cup history, Charley Barr, defended successfully 3 times in a row. Barr, a professional, turned the trick with Columbia in 1899 and 1901 and Reliance in 1903.

To make it all the more emphatic today, Ranger added to her record-breaking achievements by wiping out the two records which had stood to the credit of Sopwith's first Endeavour, beaten challenger in the hotly-contested 1934 series off Newport.

Ranger, with co-designer Olin Stephens at the wheel and Vanderbilt standing by, crossed the finish line in a brisk southwester, in the new record elapsed time of 3 hours 7 minutes 49 seconds for the 30-mile triangular cup course.

This wiped out the mark of 3:09:01 set by Endeavour I in the second race of the battle three years with the Vanderbilt-guided Rainbow. The margin between the old and new cup race marks was exactly 1:12.

On the way to the first mark, Ranger was officially timed in 1:17:45, also a record for the 10-mile windward beat. It surpassed the first Endeavour's mark of 1:18:19 by a margin of 34 seconds.

Ranger Supreme.

The climax to Ranger's all-conquering cup performance removed the slightest doubt Vanderbilt's ship is the fastest ever built for Class "J" competition. For the second straight day the defender proved her mastery to windward with a record-breaking exhibition These achievements, against keener British competition on both days, followed two previous triumphs by the biggest margins in 50 years of cup racing.

All hopes for some crowning excitement today, with fresher breezes and Endeavour II seemingly pointed for a final desperate bid to turn the tide, blew up at the outset. It was all over, to all intents and purposes, after Sopwith's disastrous false start.

There was a tense moment as both finally swung about for the line, on starboard tacks. By this time Sopwith was perilously close to the buoy marking the extremity of the starting line, opposite the official committee boat. Vanderbilt had his rival covered. Sopwith, strictly "on the spot," had nothing else to do but go for it and hope for the best. It wasn't even close, however, and the Britisher was on his way around the buoy, to make a fresh start, while the recall signal was still sounding.

Trailing by fully eight length, as he finally recrossed the line, Sopwith tried hard to upset Vanderbilt in a short-tacking duel. The Britisher tacked nine times within less than a half-hour. Vanderbilt, after covering successfully eight times to keep full command headed for the mark without further maneuvering. But for the time lost by this tacking, Ranger would have cut perhaps a minute more than she did off the 10-mile record.

Ranger had better than a half-mile as she turned, substituting a double-clewed Greta Garbo jib and staysail for the smaller double head rig used to windward. The margin on time was officially 4 minutes 5 seconds.

Endeavour Gains.

Endeavour II sliced 30 seconds from the defender's time advantage on the first 10-mile reach, pulling up to within 1,000 yards of Ranger, but lost 2 seconds on the homeward 10-mile leg.

The defender finished the fastest race of the series with the smallest spectator fleet of all doing its best to make up in noise what it lacked in numbers. Upward of 200 craft, including a destroyer flotilla and one submarine, clustered around the finish to shriek a welcome to Ranger and then, a few minutes later, give the beaten challenger an equally loud demonstration.

Dodgers Rout Bucs, 9-6, as 6 Errors Aid

Hoyt Goes Route Against Former Mates; Young Slams Home Run.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 5.—The Brooklyn Dodgers were handed a 9-to-6 victory over the Pirates today, their second in a row over the Pittsburghers.

The Bucs kicked the game away with six errors, and once they started falling apart afield the issue was never in doubt, although they collected 12 hits, to 11 for the Dodgers, and were staked to a 6-to-3 lead when Pep Young banged a homer with two aboard in the fifth.

Waite Hoyt went the distance for the Dodgers, but all he had to do against his old teammates was wait until they handed him the decision.

Dusek, Cox Victors In Mat Features

Ernie Dusek and Joe Cox were returned winners last night in the twin features of the weekly wrestling card at Griffith Stadium. A season's record throng of 2,500 fans saw Dusek throw Reb Russell with an airplane spin, after Cox had pinned Bill Sledge with a body press.

In the preliminaries Walter Podolock made a successful debut by putting Eli Fisher on the mat with a half-nelson after 14 minutes of work. Hank Barber defeated Mays McLain in 19 minutes with a flying tackle, while Abe Coleman disposed of Benitre LaRue in 16½ minutes, using a kangaroo kick.

This Morning

WITH SHIRLEY POVICH

POVICH.

With gestures that all but wrecked the fancy fixtures of his Ninth Street Shirt Shoppe and did, in fact, knock the three-for-a-buck neckties into the near-silk hosiery, Goldie Shearn explained to this department yesterday that his Phil Furr-Vittorio Venturi fight which he is offering the public at what he calls popular prices, will be a good fight.

The reformed southpaw who is now Promoter Joe Turner's right-hand man and matchmaker, said not only that but, for emphasis, said "absolute!" it will be a good fight.

* * * *

Why? this intrepid reporter asked, and instantly regretted it.

"Oi, such a ignorant fellow you are. I tell you it will be a good fight and you ask why. Such an answer you give me," and Ahearn clutched at his scalp.

* * * *

He backed away and squared off. "Two good ponchers they are, I tell you. Two ponchers always make a good fight. Venturi fights this way," and Ahearn went into a crouch, and "Furr fights this way," and Ahearn came at this department in a stand-up pose, left hand extended perilously close to the jewelry showcase.

* * * *

But he wasn't through. "When Venturi lets this go," and Ahearn crossed a right much too close to this reporter's nose," Furr will hit him with this," and instantly recovering his balance, Ahearn banged a left hook to the spot where a fraction of a moment before he had been standing as Vittorio Venturi.

* * * *

It was all getting very involved and this reporter thought it would be a good idea to call the whole thing off before somebody got hurt, but Ahearn wanted more than one word.

* * * *

"And don't forget, that Venturi or whatever he calls himself has been fighting 20-rounders all over Europe. With Furr it will only be ten rounds. Ten rounds is just a spit for Venturi; just a spit."

And—you guessed it—Ahearn spat.

* * * *

It is pretty significant that since Rogers Hornsby was given the old heave-ho as manager of the Browns and Jim Bottomley was given the job, the name of Roldie Hemsley has graced the catching post in the St. Louis line-up. And the reason is no strange one.

* * * *

It was with some surprise that baseball fans at the start of the season noticed in the box scores that one Benny Huffman had succeeded the talented Hemsley as the Browns' first-string catcher. Huffman, who had been playing college ball a year before and was making his first splash in organized baseball, apparently had displaced Hemsley.

* * * *

Folks began to wonder if young Huffman was that good. Hemsley, one of the better catchers in the league, had been the subject of a $60,000 offer by the Cleveland Indians last winter, and the Browns refused to sell him at that price, so highly did they value his services apparently.

* * * *

But this spring Hornsby gave Hemsley the go-by and installed young Huffman, a graduate of an Arkansas baseball school, as the team's No. 1 catcher, and there was a great rising of eyebrows. Apparently, Hornsby had come up with something in young Huffman.

* * * *

But those members of the Browns who were here for three days ending yesterday, had another explanation.

* * * *

"The whole thing was a joke. Huffman couldn't carry Hemsley's glove. It was a crying shame to play the rookie as our catcher, but Hornsby tried to get away with it. He wasn't concerned about the success of the Browns. He was more concerned about Huffman making good. Hornsby, you see, is half owner of the baseball school that Huffman came out of and he tried to make Huffman a first-year sensation, so it would reflect credit on his school and up the enrollment next year. That's one of the things why Hornsby wasn't popular with our players."

* * * *

Add to the folks who have an aversion for big league ball players the Washington cab drivers who rush visiting teams from the ball park to the station for waiting trains.

* * * *

A particularly communicative driver who was chauffering this reporter to the ball game yesterday said he was a red-hot baseball fan until he started to drive a cab in Washington.

And then what happened.

* * * *

"I didn't realize what cheap skates the big league ball players were until I started hauling 'em around. Four or five of 'em would crowd into my cab, the club would pay the charges, and they'd get out at the station without leaving me a thin dime."

Izzatso?

"Yeah, and not only that. They don't even bother to shut the door after they get out of the cab."

Coaches Borries, Cutter, Dornin Set for Navy's Grid Practice

Former Academy Grid Luminaries Are Ready for Another Season—This Time as Grid Teachers.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 5.—Three young naval officers, who as midshipmen played on the Naval Academy football team that broke the Army's 13-year winning streak in 1934, reported today at the academy for duty as assistant coaches of this fall's football squad.

Ensigns Fred A. (Buzz) Borries, jr.; Robert E. (Dusty) Dornin and Slade D. Cutter, will assist Lieut. Harry J. (Hank) Hardwick, head football coach at the Academy. Other assistants and their asignments will be announced next week.

Dornin was at end and Borries was in the backfield when Cutter kicked a field goal from the muddy turf of Franklin Field, Philadelphia, in 1934, to give the Navy a 3-to-0 victory over West Point, the first Navy win since 1921. All three graduated in 1935 and have been on duty in the fleet.

Borries, one of the greatest backs to represent the Academy, made the all-American team in 1934. He also played basketball and baseball while a midshipman. Dornin played basketball and lacrosse in addition to his gridiron activities, while Cutter was the undefeated Academy heavyweight boxer.

Capt. E. W. McKee, commanding the Transport Henderson, will arrive here on August 15 to relieve Capt. Robert C. Giffin as director of athletics at the Academy. Capt. Giffin will go on two months' leave before taking command of the cruise Boise, now under construction at Newport News, Va.

The Academy varsity football squad, now on a summer practice cruise aboard the Battleships New York, Arkansas and Wyoming, will leave the squadron and return to the Academy on August 13 or 14. They will go on leave, returning early next month, when football practice begins. The members of the new plebe, or freshmen, class will be called out for football practice about August 13.

Pixlee Adds Moynihan to Grid Staff

Former Notre Dame Hero to Begin Sept. 1; Was All-American.

Tim Moynihan, former star athlete at Notre Dame, has been added to the George Washington University coaching staff as an assistant, Graduate Manager Max Farrington announced today. Moynihan, who has held three college positions and played two years of professional football since he graduated from Notre Dame in 1929, will take up his duties September 1.

The exact nature of his work will not be determined until Jim Pixlee, athletic director and head football coach, returns from California late this month. Moynihan is expected, however, to assist in tutoring both varsity and freshman grid squads.

All-Western Center.

All-Western center two years at the South Bend school, Tim's specialty has been coaching the line. He enrolled in the G. W. School of Physical Education last February, seeking a B. S. degree. His A. B. at Notre Dame had been in academic work.

When the Colonials began spring training in March, Moynihan was asked to assist unofficially in the coaching. When Tim recently indicated he would be interested in joining the coaching staff, Pixlee lost no time in reaching an agreement with him.

Born in Chicago, Timothy attended high school at Rawlins, Wyo., then entered Notre Dame in 1925. He won letters in baseball and basketball, as well as football, at South Bend, and after graduation was named assistant line coach to Hunk Anderson.

Named Line Coach.

The following year he was head line coach and freshman basketball coach at Xavier College in Cincinnati. Then followed two seasons with the Chicago Cardinals in the National Professional Football League. Tim was named all-pro center the first year.

In the spring of 1934 he accepted an offer from Texas U. to coach the line for his old teammate at Notre Dame, Jack Chevigny, who remained as head coach through last season. After two seasons there, Moynihan returned to Chicago for a year, where he was engaged in work for a construction company.

During the spring of 1930, Tim came to Washington to assist Tom Mills, then head coach, with spring training at Georgetown. He returned to Notre Dame that fall as Anderson's assistant.

Moynihan will be 29 on September 23. He has been working as engineer at the Takoma swimming pool all summer.

Giants Down Reds, 2-0, in 12th Inning

Uprising Ends Duel of Castleman, Grissom; Ryan's Single Aids.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, Aug. 5.—Breaking up one of the season's closest pitching duels, the New York Giants bunched four hits for two runs in the twelfth inning today to whip the Cincinnati Reds, 2 to 0, and gain a full game in the National League race.

Hero of the struggle was Clyde Castleman, big right-hand pitcher of the Giants' staff. Although still ailing from the sacroiliac condition of his back, which had kept him on the sidelines for two weeks, Castleman, making his first start since July 21, stopped the Reds with eight hits, fanned six, and generally outpitcher Lefty Lee Grissom to earn the decision.

Walters Star As Phils Halt Cubs, 4 to 2

Allows League's Leaders 4 Hits; Hit Streak of Hartnett Stopped.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 5.—Backing up Bucky Walters' four-hit pitching with a three-run first inning flurry off Clyde Shoun, the lowly Philadelphia Phillies rose up to knock off the league-leading Cubs again today, 4 to 2. The victory, their second straight here, gave them the series, two games to one.

Frank Demaree's thirteenth home run, his third in as many days over Wrigley Field's new temporary left-field partition, scoring Jim Collins, who had singled ahead of him in the fourth inning, accounted for the Cubs' only runs off Walters. He allowed only two other Cubs to pass first base and only one other reached third.

Herschel Martin led the Phillies' 10-hit attack off a trio of Cub pitchers, starting the first inning scoring with a double and, after wasting a single in-between, hitting a homer off Charley Root in the ninth inning.

Post Notes on Fishin' . . . . . By Bill Ackerman

Variation in the distance of the Gulf Stream from the coast is liable to make a cock-eyed season out of any year. Just such was the season of 1936, when pompano were taken far up the Jersey beaches, and pounds at Beach Haven were lifting parrot fish and Nassau grouper. Ordinarily the Chesapeake is free of oddities piscatorial, and goes no further than to have a good or a bad season; however, sailfish have been reported in the lower bay, a fact never proven to our satisfaction, and probably a marlin, strayed from the nearby, and now famous Jacks Pot.

ACKERMAN

Now, there comes to light in the bay, fish, that as far as can be ascertained, have never been known to frequent these waters. Worcester, an ocean front county showed last year a catch of 1500 pounds, Spanish mackerel, that in their northern hegira during the early spring, head out to the open sea when they hit Hatteras. Capt. George Bowen of Solomons, reported the catch on Tuesday by the Flag pounds of not just one or two, which would have been a real oddity, but of several bushels—fish that averaged close to three pounds. On Wednesday he called again to say that about the same amount had again been lifted.

* * * *

These pounds are located about ten miles above Cove Point, in just such a section as Spanish mackerel are known to prefer in southern waters, so, for any anglers who might happen to fish this area, keep your eyes open. They will strike any trolled lure that a blue will take. While it is hardly worthwhile to make a special trip in the hope of getting in them, as Edgar Bowen is doing today, it is well to remember that there is liable to be quite a school of them and that they will probably loiter there until cold weather. They supply a brand of sport that is in every way, comparable to trolling for bluefish.

For the weekend—slow on the blues down the Virginia shore, but exceptional catches of hardheads and weaks. Rock at Tall Timbers, and with them, the friendly and guide of many local anglers, Capt. Bill Goldsborough, who in the few days he has been back at his old stand, has produced several exceptional catches. For the present he is using the dock of one of his most ardent disciples, U. E. Blair, at Piney Point, and who will also be glad to make reservations for him through Decatur 361.

Plenty of hardheads for the boats fishing Point Lookout and the Middles, some weakfish and a few blues. At Solomons, the boats are fishing the deep water off Hoopers Light and Point No. Point for fairly consistant catches of hardheads. The rock are temperamental and are rising but a few times each day. If you want to try and luck out on one of the big catches that come every day or so from the Gooses, take one of the boats in the fleet at Breezy Point (Old Plum Point). In case you would want to make a reservation, call Capt. Becker, Pr. Fred. 30F2.

* * * *

The catches of marlin continue at Ocean City, with not the slightest abation. On Tuesday Lou Gebrig and Bill Dickey fished with Paul Townsend on his Jacpau and each of them snagged one—85 and 90 pounds. Four local anglers, just returned from a trip with Capt. Josh Bunting got one each in spite of the fact that they had never tried it before. Bernie Vollmer's 110-pounder was tops with Charlie Trefler's weighing 55 pounds next. Art Johnson and Steve Marenka tied with a pair that weighed 55 pounds each. There was a report that 200 pound blue marlin was taken, but so far there has been no authentic proof of it. Dolphin are striking good and the bluefish are running as high as 200 to the boat.

On Wednesday there was so much muddy water pouring out of the Monocacy that it is very improbable that it will clear enough to fish before Sunday. The Potomac above was clear and there is every chance that some nice catches will be made from there to Harpers Ferry. The river, at Penn Fields was reasonably clear Wednesday evening.

Light tackle enthusiasts, until the past year, have been compelled to use bait casting rods with a freshwater reel; any other combination being out of balance, but now several companies are making regular boat rods with tips that run between four and six ounces. One in particular, made by Montague, has a cork butt and a 6-foot 5½-ounce tip; with such fine action that even though a small hardhead can give it a good workout, there is still enough stamina to stand sail or tarpon fishing.

The one drawback was a reel light enough to match with enough capacity to meet the varying demands of salt water fishing. Ollie Atlas solved the problem with the new Featherwate 9-ounce 350-yard capacity reel, that he had sent from the factory in San Francisco; one for himself and one for each of several of his choice cronies. Lucky to be included, we have given this reel continuous service since early spring; found it fast and clean in casting, foolproof in changing gears and easy in action. In size about 4-0, it is in weight just about half that of a 2-0 vom Hofe.

So seldom does anything new in the way of improved tackle for the so-called small fishing come out that this new reel, that originally was built for the striped bass fishing in San Francisco Bay, immediately strikes your fancy. Have Ollie show you one.

Scratch Single Cheats Pitcher of No-Hitter

Henry Chaplin pitched a near no-hit, no-run game yesterday as Bolling Field blanked the Procurement Division, 5-0, in a Federal League game. Chaplin, a right-hander, retired the first 16 men to face him but his bid for fame collapsed in the sixth when an easy roller took a crazy hop over third base for a single. Wissner of the winners made a great catch.

MARACONNA, on the outside all the way, came samely under pressure and lasted to hold the place safe from SOLITARY. The latter, on the inside and unable to gain racing room early, worked his way up steadily in the last three furlongs and came willingly in the stretch drive.

The latter took command at once, was rated along under slight restraint and fought it out willingly to the close. GALLANT EAGLE moved up on the outside down the backstretch, was placed under punishment after rounding the far turn, came to the outside of the leaders in the stretch and fought it out with good energy to close.

Selections at Suffolk Downs.

Dear Al,

Managed to chase home a couple of short-priced ones and was beaten in two instances by head margins, so I guess I'll have to postpone the renaming of this column "Horses That Will Not Win Today." His Washington followers will be pleased to learn that Aneroid will start in the $50,000 added Massachusett Handicap on Saturday. The son of The Porter, never much of a work horse, showed Trainer Dian Kerr enough in his recent drill to warrant shipping to this track. However, at the heavy impost, Aneroid will have to be at his best to win and, if he wins, I believe he will be a good price, possibly as much as 6 to 1. Charlie Rosengarten, who has ridden Aneroid in all his big races, will be in the saddle. What the Cumberland Fair Association expects to be the biggest meeting in the history of the Western Maryland track, opens on Tuesday. Virtually the same horses that have been competing at the Bel Air meeting will see action. I have a limited number of Cumberland badges which I will give on first-come-first-served basis to those who send self addressed stamped envelopes, to Bill Bennings, Washington Post, Washington, D. C.

BILL.

First race—Many Moons seems to have found the right spot in the day's opening event. Needs only the right ride to take down the major portion of the stake. Nallta J. gets in with lightweight and is dangerous. Primer to take care of the others.

Second race—Playnot comes from a stable of fit horses and has the speed necessary to overcome the outside post position. Lotta Fun and Zevanaid are likely to draw the chief betting and will battle it out if the top one makes mistakes.

Third race—Multimillion appears to be the best of the juvenile maidens in this bulky field. This is a good race to pass up. Fencing Son and Rhodium for the second and third money.

Fourth race—Busy Prince has an edge over this sport of company. Draws a good post position and appears to have the right rider in Luther. Berry Patch and Grey Shot to complete the money picture.

Fifth race—Dancing Doll will appreciate the feather assignment and promises to do a lot of running in this field. Mixwell, the probable favorite, is formidable. Dreel may awake at good odds.

Sixth Race—All Rowes has worked well for this test and needs only to run back to best races to take down the major portion of the purse. Aura and Rudenia are among the other possibilities in the field.

Seventh race—War Stripes and the veteran Stone Martin probably will fight it out for the main award in this mile event. Both are at home at the route. Winter Sport for the third money.

Eighth race—Apprentice has to go back but not far enough to be out of the chief contention here. Personally, I'm going to string along. Even Up and Satrapal to be closest at the end.

Best bet—Playnot.

Active Buying Lifts Wheat, Corn and Oats

Wheat Jumps 3⅜ Cents Maximum, Corn, 3¾; Soy Beans, 4.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 5.—The grain market's best rally in a fortnight lifted wheat 2 to 3⅜ cents a bushel, corn 3 to 3¾, oats 1½ to 2 and rye 3⅜ at times today.

These were maximum gains recorded in the final hour of a rather active session, but most of the contracts listed reacted slightly before the close. September corn, which soared above $1 a bushel, came within ¼ of the limit on daily price fluctuations. Soy beans rose the 4 cents per bushel limit. Liverpool wheat closed strong at ⅞ to 1½ cent advance. Short covering and stop loss orders accelerated the rise in all grains.

Net gains for the day were: Wheat ⅜ to 2½, September and December 1.15⅝ to 1.15⅞, May 1.16½ to 1.16⅝, corn 1½ to 2⅞, September 99⅛ to 99¾, December 67¼ to 67⅞, May 69⅛ to 69¾, oats 1⅛ to 1¾, September 29¾ to 29⅞, rye 1¾ to 3⅜, September 31¼, lard 43 to 50.

Excess Reserve $ 110,000,000 Lower in Week

Federal Board Reports Third Successive Weekly Decline.

By the Associated Press.

Excess reserves of Federal Reserve System member banks declined $110,000,000 to $700,000,000 during the week ended August 4.

The Federal Reserve Board's weekly condition statement last evening showed that the decrease in these lendable funds was due largely to an increase in money in circulation and a climb in Treasury deposits with Federal Reserve banks.

Money in circulation increased $44,000,000 during the week to $6,468,000,000. The outflow of funds into circulation, which is usual over a month-end, reduces excess reserves in approximately the amount of the outflow.

Treasury deposits with Federal Reserve institutions rose $81,000,000 for the week to $309,000,000. This increase indicated a shift of money from commercial banks to the reserve institution.

The drop in excess reserves was the third successive weekly decline, the total decrease amounting to $260,000,000. For the week ended August 4, the board reported its holdings of Government securities remained unchanged at $2,526,000,000.

Allis-Chalmers Plans $25,000,000 Issue

New York, Aug. 5 (AP).—Allis-Chalmers Mfg. Co., Milwaukee, Wis., plans to raise $25,000,000 in new capital through issuance of convertible debentures to be offered first to common stockholders, the latter were informed in a letter from the company.

The letter said current business is at higher levels than in the earlier months of the year, when new financing to the amount of $16,000,000 was contemplated, and directors believe a larger amount of new funds is called for than was authorized at a special meeting of stockholders June 2.

Lead at 6.50 Cents, Second Lift in 2 Days

New York, Aug. 5 (AP).—A boost of ¼ cent a pound in the price of lead, the second advance in as many days, was announced today by leading producers. The rise made the new price 6.50 cents a pound, New York, and 6.35 East St. Louis.

The higher prices were quoted by the American Smelting & Refining and St. Joseph Lead companies.

Bituminous Production.

The National Coal Association estimates bituminous coal production in the United States for the week ended July 31 as approximately 7,700,000 net tons. Production for the corresponding week: 1936, 7,386,000 tons; 1935, 5,374,000 tons.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
Special Correspondent.

Stocks Mark Time in Less Active Trading; Bonds Firm; Wheat Higher.

New York, Aug. 5.—On a sales volume of around 850,000 shares the stock market stuck to its irregular price changes in a narrow range, while most commodity markets hardened. September wheat rose 2⅛ cents to $1.15⅝ a bushel.

Considerable improvement in the London market, where the idea is growing that the British trade recovery is going to take on a new lease on life largely because of the remarkable rise in international trade as shown by the mounting rates and demands for ocean shipping, finds some reflection here. Actual purchasing for foreign account is reported to be moderate at best, but somewhat more active than it was a short time ago, when some repatriation of French funds (now stopped) was taking place and when all foreign holders were frightened at the proposals for a high tax on their income and stock profits made on this side.

It is still the intention of the Government, as shown by the joint Congressional committee's report made today, to tax foreign capital gains over here. The committee's report, it seems, contains less of a jolt to foreign traders and investors than at first had been threatened, and the usual questions of its practicability are being raised. Some way doubtless will be found to enforce such taxes, but it may be that before Congress can get around to passing the act the situation will have changed so much that its desirability will be questioned.

Gold.

Gold isn't coming over here as fast at it was, and much of the so-called hot money that we now hold isn't going to be chased home just because it will be taxed on this side. What French funds fear, for example, is not the sharply increased French taxes but confiscation, to say nothing of complete loss in case the threatened currency inflation debacle takes place. On balance this market still seems to be the most attractive for funds from all over the world.

Dollars were low against sterling, but the decline was the result of sales of dollars for other account than that of traders leaving our securities market. French currency was held steady. No essential change was noted in the money market, in spite of the low state at the moment of excess reserves in this area. Banks paid a higher rate for Federal funds, but the condition was regarded as temporary. Government bonds were steady. Most of the demand for bonds flowed into the railroad list.

Rail Shares Firm.

Railroad shares, on the other hand, developed a mixed market. Traders who at first thought the compromise with non-operating railroad employes for a smaller percentage of wage increase than had been asked for would be bullish changed their minds. Any increase, it is obvious, will send a few more roads into financial difficulties and will tend to bring down the earnings shown on stocks of all roads. Santa Fe and Southern weakened. Chesapeake & Ohio and Southern Pacific strengthened.

Utility shares were firm, although Telephone softened. Western Union again felt pressure. Copper shares advanced further, and a feature of the market was the lively interest shown for a while in the low-priced shares, some of them clearly in the cat and dog class. Callahan Zinc was a low-priced stock to turn over in numerous 1,000-share blocks and to move up a fraction. Radio continued active at a somewhat higher price.

In the miscellaneous group Bigelow Sanford Carpet gained more than a point on the higher dividend. Madison Square Garden added a point. Montgomery Ward and Sears-Roebuck were prominent on the strong side. Revere Brass and Inbuoyant. General Electric receded buoyant. Generl Electric receded under profit taking.

Every Little Bit Helps.

The inflation mills may be grinding slowly, but the wheels are turning. In the day's news: Railroad employes in the non-operating groups agree upon an 8¼ per cent increase in wages; trainmen insist on a 20 per cent wage increase; advances of $60 and $100 in selling prices of LaSalle and Cadillac motor cars to come; railroads seeking higher freight rates; Congress working on Black-Connery bill to boost wages and reduce production and labor hours; commodity prices advancing steadily; record note circulation reported by the Bank of England and the Bank of France; Stock Exchange brokers moving to lift commission rates; Federal deficit for July exactly double that of July, 1936.

British View.

The London Financial News quoted from a speech of D. M. Mason in the House of Commons: "Speaking of the tripartite agreement, he contended that neither England nor France had carried out their part of the bargain. Both countries had inflated their currencies: England by over £50,000,000 and France by over 2,000,000,000 francs, as compared with a year ago. That depreciation of the pound sterling and the franc were the principal causes of the flow of gold to America, which would continue until and unless the inflation were stopped. Stabilization of the currency, said Mr. Mason, should be our aim, and to that end every effort should be directed. Stabilization meant fixing the gold content of the pound by statute and making the pound convertible into gold on demand. Stabilization of the currency did not mean deflation and unemployment. There need be no limit to the issue of notes provided there was convertibility. When stabilization had been accomplished at or about the present exchange level and foreign lending resumed, he anticipated a great expansion of our export trade."

Opportunity.

The view of some British observers (whose voices seldom are heard above the shoutings of the inflationists, just as is the case on this side) is timely over here now that Senator Thomas is again blowing the blast to rally the clans for a fresh assault on even the semblance of a sound currency system. Had new proposals to weaken confidence in the dollar been proposed a year, or even six months ago, they would not have been taken seriously; but now with some anxiety rising over a possible business setback the case is different. Once let business recede appreciably and the inflationists will again attempt to stampede the Government into a fresh go at inflation by the currency route. We already are a long way down the road on the credit side and going farther and faster every day with the growing Treasury deficit.

What? No Firing Squad?

In the first five days after opening the subscription lists of the (Russian) defense loan, 91.6 per cent of the issue was subscribed, according to the monthly review of the U. S. S. R. trade delegation. Even in a free capitalist country the treasury grows peevish unless it can announce an immediate oversubscription on its loans. Incidentally "all profits from the loan are free from taxation."

Cadillac, La Salle, Olds Prices Raised

Detroit, Aug. 5 (AP).—The Cadillac-LaSalle Division of General Motors Corporation announced today price increases on its models effective at the close of business August 14. The increase range from $60 on the LaSalle to $100 on the Cadillac. Oldsmobile prices also will be advanced by $45 effective Monday. The Ford Motor Co. already has increased the prices of many of its models $15 to $35.

Life Insurance Leader Again Tops Million

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Selling more than $120,000 of new paid life insurance for July, Leopold V. Freudberg, long-time leading producer of the John F. Cremen agency of the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Co., has again qualified as a "paying" member of the $1,000,000 round table of the National Association of Life Underwriters for the year 1936-37.

Mr. Freudberg, who qualified for life membership is this organization in 1932, is the only life underwriter in Washington to win a 1936-37 membership. Commenting on the business for the year just closed, he explained there is a definite trend at the present time toward the higher premium insurance providing income settlements for the insured at retirement age. Included in this production of better than $1,000,000 was one case for $100,000 and one for $154,000. Mr. Freudberg plans to attend the national convention of the life underwriters association at Denver the latter part of this month.

Sugar Battle.

Charging Western beet sugar representatives with sabotaging the international sugar agreement in an endeavor to obtain special legislation for their own interests, Clarence R. Bitting, Florida sugar producer, has launched a new offensive in the Washington sugar battle.

Explaining that 21 nations, including the United States, had agreed on the provisions of the agreement after two months of deliberation. Mr. Bitting contended that it should have immediate ratification by the United States Senate.

In support of Mr. Bitting's contention is a statement of Senator Claude Pepper, of Florida, saying, "In my opinion, the ratification of this international sugar agreement, entered into between the sugar-producing countries of the world, will dispense with the necessity of any legislation by the Congress on the question of sugar. If we ratify this international agreement, it will make it possible for continental United States to produce as much sugar as it is capable of producing and will save the American sugar consumer from the burden of the huge benefit payments proposed by the pending sugar legislation now in Congress, to be paid as a subsidy to certain of the sugar-producing areas of the country."

Brokers Optimistic.

Life Insurance Volume.

Total volume of life insurance sales in the South Atlantic States in June amounted to $59,658,000, an advance of 7 per cent over the month a year ago. The total for the first half of the current year is $349,936,000, a gain of 11 per cent over the like period in 1936. The half-year total for the United States stands at $3,816,351,000, an upturn of 8 per cent over last year's comparative period.

Savings Insured.

Savings of 9,874 persons in eight savings, building and loan associations in the District of Columbia are now insured up to $5,000 on each account by the Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corporation, it is announced by General Manager Nugent Fallon. Assets of these insured thrift and home financing institutions total $8,921,194. Other local savings and loan associations have also submitted applications for insurance.

Personal.

Albert S. Gatley, executive vice president of Lincoln National Bank, has been visiting at Ocean City, Md.

President M. F. Calnan, of Liberty National Bank, will attend the convention of the American Legion in New York and the convention of the American Bankers Association in Boston this fall.

Charles H. Doing, vice president of Washington Loan & Trust Co., and in charge of its West End office, has returned from a three weeks' stay at Saranac Lake, N. Y.

Chairman William D. Hoover, of the board of National Savings & Trust Co., has been taking his vacation in New Hampshire. Auditor Audley A. P. Savage, of that institution, spent his vacation in New Jersey.

A. Chester Flather, a local comanager of G. M.-P. Murphy & Co., has been vacationing in Connecticut. Paul P. Rodler, a partner in W. B. Hibbs & Co., is another broker on vacation.

Vice President Howard Moran, of American Security & Trust Co., has concluded a month's vacation which included a motor tour up the Atlantic Coast to New England and the White Mountains.

Auditor R. Earle Haycock, of Riggs National Bank, has returned from a visit to the Virginia beaches. B. Gwynn Dent, an assistant cashier of that institution, spent his vacation at Cape May.

Irving Zirpel, secretary and assistant trust officer, Union Trust Co., selected Tall Timbers, Md., as the place for his vacation.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Aug. 5.—Southpaw Edgar Smith, of the Athletics, almost won his first game of the season today, but with two on and two out in the eighth Hank Greenberg hit a slow ball out of the park to give Detroit a 5-to-3 victory.

It was the twenty-fifth homer of the year for the slugging Tiger first sacker and gave Elon Auker victory in a close game.

The two will be members of the supporting cast for Phil Furr's 10-round squabble with Vittorio Venturi, the Eyetalian with the organ-grinder handle. Torrance, of himself, should be able to support the entire show, but there's nothing like a little help.

Irish Johnny Dean, who flattened Al Dunbar in one round last week, is back on the card in another 10-rounder. His opponent, why Al Dunbar.

Bob Burns Says—

I think one of the most truthful ones in my family is my Aunt Kezzy Moomaw. There's a woman who wouldn't tell a falsehood for anything. One day my uncle came home and he found Aunt Kezzy all upset. He said, "What in the world is the matter with you?" and she says, "We just got an invitation to attend one of those terrible dinners at Mrs. Hymer Van Smoot." She said, "I'd rather take a beatin' than go to one of their dinners—because I know we'll just be bored to tears and the food is terrible!"

My uncle says, "Well, why don't you just call her up that night and tell her you've got a headache?" Aunt Kezzy was horrified! She says, "Why I couldn't think of tellin' her that—that would be a deliberate lie!" She said, "You just sit down and write her a letter and tell her we accept with pleasure!"—Bob Burns.

Cancer Center Is Authorized By Roosevelt

pleted, but it could be put into use immediately. It will be loaned to the various States and to reputable institutions.

Through making radium and other treatment facilities available to sections in which there is a scarcity, it is estimated that 25,000 lives can be saved annually.

The main purpose of the bill, however, is the eradication of concer and that is a research problem. Surgery, radium and X-ray are the three recognized methods of concer treatment, although many others are foisted on the public annually. One of the duties of the institute will be the testing of purported cancer cures.

Co-ordinates Work.

The Public Health Service has been spending around $100,000 on cancer research annually, the work being carried on in Washington and in rented space at Harvard University. The work will now be co-ordinated and enlarged to include all phases of cancer diagnosis, prevention and treatment. Grants in aid may be made to workers in other laboratories and the institute may call in American and foreign authorities for expert advice.

Dr. Carl Voeghtlin, who now heads the public health cancer research work, is expected to head the new institute. Dr. Voeghtlin is now visiting leading cancer laboratories in Europe, in preparation for the increased work here.

The National Cancer Advisory of six members is authorized in the bill. Dr. Thomas Parran, the surgeon general, will be ex officio chairman of the council. Dr. Thompson is expected to be another member. Others will be drawn from the American medical profession.

Damage to Omaha's Hull Is Less Than Anticipated

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 5 (AP).—Damages sustained by the hull of the Cruiser Omaha when she spent 12 days aground on a coral reef in the Bahamas are "not nearly so bad as had been feared," officials at the Norfolk Navy Yard said today following an inspection of the vessel.

A few plates will have to be taken off and straightened and some of the structural work inside will have to be replaced, Capt. Roy W. Syden, manager of the industrial department of the yard said today.

Coroner Rules Death Of Chinese Natural

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald yesterday issued a certificate of accidental death after an investigation of the death of Charlie Wee, Chinese laundryman, of 5515 Colorado avenue northwest.

Wee's death aroused police suspicion when he was found in his laundry with several cuts on the back of his head. An autopsy disclosed death was due to natural internal ailments.

Aviation Cadet Steele has been assigned to the aviation unit of the U. S. S. Brooklyn for sea duty.

Payment Due on This Today—Driver Still Has His Life

Clyde White, of Dodge Park, Md., probably should consider himself lucky. He jumped a split second before a fast passenger train hit his auto at the Landover crossing yesterday, leaving sundry parts of it in the little heap shown above. Last April, White's youngest child, Louise, 14 months old, died a few days after he got work for the first time in a year, and two weeks later his wallet and $28 were stolen, all of which was followed by the eight-day illness of Betty Frances, 3, the second child, and the purchase of the automobile on which a payment was to have been made today.

Clyde White, of Dodge Park, Md., nearly lost his life yesterday when, despite shouts of a watchman at the Landover (Md.) crossing, he tried vainly to move his automobile from the path of a speeding train.

Tom Owens, the watchman, said he shouted twice at White before he jumped out of his stalled car and ran to safety, a split second before the locomotive struck his automobile.

White left his home at 2 a. m. to get gasoline, his wife said.

The car stalled on the Pennsylvania Railroad crossing and White attempted to move it by using the starter. So close did the locomotive come to striking White that flying parts cut his right hand.

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

Sensible.

The National Civil Service Reform League, a mighty battler against the spoils system, plans to carry its fight in a most sensible direction—to the movie screen. This is a move entirely new and different in the league's long war against what it calls the "grab bag" and some results from it are entirely probable.

Beginning today there will be picturization of "the patronage racket" in contrast to the merit system in the civil service and it will appear in the larger cities, the smaller cities and the towns during the next 90 days, the league promises.

"The public is little aware of the grave situation confronting this country engendered by the biggest racket in America today—the spoils system," says the league, adding:

"The picture is most timely, coming just before the local elections, when political candidates will be making public promises to extend the civil service, and private promises to reward voters with places on the public pay roll."

* * * *

The league thus recognizes something that seems not always to be recognized by many battlers for the merit system—the fact that the country is not aware of the dangers in the patronage system. This column several weeks ago tried to argue the futility of all the merit system appeals that are made directly to Congressmen. It was said then that the surest approach is through the people who elect the Congressmen, and through them only. There are realities in politics that would make things work around that way. And this column still contends that not one person in a thousand—outside of Washington—ever gives the merit system one-tenth of a minute's thought in any given month.

* * * *

"The picturization of the civil service problem should help to hasten the end of the patronage game, too long played by the short-sighted politicians of all political parties," says the league.

It certainly would help a lot.

Notes.

The load of detail work incident to the functioning of that fast-moving Interior Department Recreation Association is heavy on the laps of committee leaders, who are: S. W. Crosthwait (Indian Affairs), general activities; Edward J. Kelly (National Capital Parks), athletics; Ian Forbes (National Park Service), social; Howard R. Stinson heads the membership group (he reports increased interest throughout the department), and Michael Straus (Press Section) handles the publicity . . . E. M. Rowalt, of the Soil Conservation Service, has emerged from a labor, the penning of a new bulletin, "Soil and Water Conservation in the Pacific Northwest," a work calculated to aid farmers and ranchers of Washington, Oregon and Idaho especially . . . The Civil Service Commission announces 11 States and the District of Columbia as in quota excess: Missouri, Massachusetts, Vermont, Nebraska, Utah, Iowa, South Dakota, Washington, North Dakota, Virginia, Maryland and the District . . . Add those momentarily stalled: The U. F. W. A. Local, No. 1 (WPA) after its brief session the other day with David Niles, WPA's assistant administrator . . . The union wanted to complain that its members were spied on, slandered, denied promotion . . . The assistant administrator wanted to confront accused with accuser right there and then, on the spot . . . As this is written, the union is in a huddle . . . For a little escape from it all we recommend a reading of that newest paper in possession of the Smithsonian—the one throwing a new light on the Battle of the Little Big Horn . . . Walter Clifford, of Washington, made the paper available . . . Incidentally, this column on Sunday will give the sketch of an Indian fight that has produced a bill in the present Congress . . . The Treasury Department's agents go on the pistol range Tuesday and Wednesday of next week in a training program that has the personal interest of Secretary Morgenthau . . . The contests will be held on the Camp Simms range and the winners will go to the national championship matches at Camp Perry, Ohio, later this month . . . A six-man team is anticipated.

The National Civil Service Reform League points to an old Congressional custom and issues, therewith, a warning:

"The closing rush for adjournment is generally the most dangerous period for the civil service provisions in important bills. It is an old trick of the short-sighted politicians in Congress to slip over these spoils provisions in that fashion, knowing that the President will in all likelihood approve the urgent bills, notwithstanding their flouting of the merit system."

The Library of Congress group, which has been considering affiliation with the United Federal Workers of America, have elected these temporary officers: P. H. Hylton, president; James D. Montgomery, vice president; Elden Billings, recording secretary; Mary Van Casteel publicity chairman, and C. A. Kelley, corresponding secretary. The group has requested a charter.

Mrs. Casey at 70 Finds Her Life Just Beginning

Retired U. S. Worker Will Spend Last Years Painting.

Mrs. Anna M. Casey, 70, observed two events yesterday, her birthday and her retirement from the Government service. And, curiously, through her stout resolve she hopes to prove retirement can be a stepping stone to greater activity, and that a business career can start at 70.

The people in National Guard Bureau, Munitions Building, decided to combine a birthday party for Mrs. Casey with the ceremony they had planned for her retirement, which comes next Tuesday. So in consequence she found her desk—at which she works as an examiner and accountant—loaded with flowers, surrounded by her fellow-workers and fixed with a cake with candles and bright icing.

Gen. Albert H. Blanding, chief of the National Guard Bureau, told Mrs. Casey "few of us in the service ever accumulate what is known as the material rewards of the world, but we can attain to the esteem and respect of our fellow-workers—and that is what you have done." He presented her a gift on behalf of the employes.

Now, with retirement that would assure her no future worries, Mrs. Casey announces there will be "no rocking chair for me—I intend going into business for myself." She hopes to recapture the art of painting she gave up 45 years ago when children came and there were other things to look after.

Her aim is to establish an art shop where she can color Christmas and birthday cards, do minor art work until—and she is hopeful of it—her grasp of portrait painting returns.

She has done much art work in her time, and enjoyably—especially during those times when she was in England and would stop by remote waysides with her easel. She taught school in Maryland, then entered Government service, first with the Printing Office, then in the War Department. Her career was broken and in all she has served 19 years.

Officers Are Elected By Dancing Masters

Leroy A. Thayer, of Washington, was chosen first vice president of the Dancing Masters of America at their annual meeting yesterday. Mrs. Montie Beach, of Houston, Tex., was re-elected president. Other officers are Joshua C. Cockey, of Baltimore, second vice president; Jack Bowman, of Pittsburgh, third vice president; Miss Julia Mildred Harper, of Richmond, fourth vice president; Walter U. Soby, of Hartford, secretary-treasurer, and Ernest E. Ryan, of Los Angeles, director at large.

The dancing teachers voted to hold their next convention in New Orleans.

Extradition Mandatory For Montague, Ruling

Los Angeles, Aug. 5 (AP).—Golfdom's erstwhile mystery man, John Montague, must be extradited to New York, whether Gov. Frank Merriam wills it or not, James Howie, State deputy attorney general, declared today.

Eastern authorities are here to return Montague, under the name of LaVerne Moore, to Essex County, N. Y., on charges of participating in a roadhouse holdup in 1930. The Governor has the extradition request under advisement.

Child Bride, 11, Loves Her Doll More Than Elderly Husband

Spouse, 67, Arrested for Falsifying Girl's Age for License; Couple Wed in Field by Rail-Splitter Preacher; 'I Want to Go Home,' She Says.

By the United Press.

Poplar Bluff, Mo., Aug. 5.—May Anderson Grimes, 11, hugged her doll last night and said she loved it more than she did her 67-year-old husband.

She was bewildered by the week's developments, which included her marriage to William H. Grimes, the gift of a new dress and a hat, and now her detention by juvenile authorities.

The elderly bridegroom was held on a charge of falsifying the child's age when he obtained a marriage license Tuesday. He said May, 4 feet 10 inches tall and weighing 60 pounds, was 18.

"I don't know why they're causing us this trouble," Grimes, a farm laborer, said. "I wanted to make a good home for her and make her happy."

"He Was Nice to Me."

May said she didn't really love her husband.

"I love my doll, Martha, much more," she said. "She is named for my dead sister. He was nice to me, though. He kept asking me to marry him and finally I told him all right. Papa and Mama seemed to think it was all right."

"He bought me these, too. Ain't they pretty and nice?"

May and Grimes were married by the Rev. Carl Holliday, a Neeleyville minister. Grimes said he and his bride were walking in the country after getting the license Tuesday when they saw the minister splitting railroad ties.

"We just decided right then to go and do it," Grimes said. "I asked the Reverend to marry us but he said he didn't have time. Said he had to get his winter's wood cut. 'Well, I said, can't you marry us right here,' so he took out a pocket Bible and did it."

"He said a verse and asked me to say 'I do,'" explained May. "I said it and then we came back home and told the folks we had done it."

J. J. Alexander, May's father, said he and Grimes had been friends for 45 years. He lives near the Arkansas line and does farm work. He has four other children, the oldest 14 years and the youngest 10 months.

"About two weeks ago Grimes asked May to marry him but she refused," Alexander said. "He kept begging her until she gave in. Then Essie, that's my wife, May and Grimes went to Corning, Ark., to get a license. The clerk turned 'em down, and they went to Poplar Bluff and Grimes got it. It seemed all right to us. Grimes is a good man."

Butler County officials took first steps today to annul the marriage. Prosecutor Randolph Weber announced a preliminary hearing for Grimes will be held next week.

Circuit Judge R. J. Copeland termed the case "the worst that has come to my attention in my seven years on the bench." He said he hoped to place the girl in a "good home."

"I want to go home."

Maryland Woman, 94, Gets Roosevelt Letter

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 5.—Mrs. Lydia H. Hitchcock, who observed her ninety-fourth birthday yesterday, received a letter of congratulation from President Franklin D. Roosevelt. Her only granddaughter, Mrs. Eleanor Charles Johnston, and two great-grandsons were at her birthday party.
